ENNIS REVENUE BILL
ADOPTED BY SENATE

Measure Passed in Practically Same Form as in House—Agreement Expected on Tax Act.

Double indication that the legislative deadlock on tax reform legislation, which has existed for a week past in the general assembly, is nearing the breaking point came on Thursday when the house adopted a resolution signifying its willingness to compromise on the Lankford income tax bill, and the senate passed the Ennis revenue enforcement measure in practically the same form in which it was adopted by the house.

The house voted late Thursday night, 140 to 22, to adopt a resolution instructing its seventh conference committee on the Lankford bill that it could accept a compromise on the lines laid down in the message from Governor Walker, delivered to the assembly Wednesday. The resolution does not mention the governor's recommendations, but it is identical with the plan he suggested.

Plan Compromise.
Under the plan the committee is instructed to accept a compromise, under which the house is to yield to the senate by permitting the word "net" to remain in the bill as applied to incomes to be taxed, but with the proviso that this shall not affect in any way special taxes now levied against various classes of gross incomes in the general tax act, the cigar and cigarette act, the gasoline act, and others.

The house also recedes on the item of exemptions, accepting the senate clause adopting a schedule of minimum personal exemptions. The house asks the senate, in turn, to recede from its position on the clause allowing offsetting of ad valorem tax payments against income tax payments, or vice versa, and thus leave this issue to be settled when the time comes for the assembly to adopt an enabling act, after the income tax amendment is ratified by the people. This offsetting provision was written into the bill by the senate, but amended out by the house.

By its action on Thursday night, in overwhelmingly voting for this resolution, the house placed itself in Anita Southwick Leaps From Window After Entertaining 26 at Lunch.

New York, December 13.—Anita Southwick, a young woman living in the Hotel Brevoort, Fifth avenue and Eighth street, today jumped from a sixth-story window and crashed through the roof of a sedan parked below. She probably will survive. A waiter had just handed Miss Southwick the check for a luncheon party of 27 girls. She excused herself, left the room, and then leaped. When the manager sought an explanation from her 26 companions, he found they had all disappeared.

Judge Knox Orders Dissolution of Cement Manufacturers' Protective Association.

New York, December 13.—Federal Judge Knox today signed a decree dissolving the Cement Manufacturers' Protective Association. On October 23, Judge Knox ordered dissolution of the association on the ground that it operated in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. His decision was reached after extended litigation by the government. In his order, the judge extended the dissolution to include all the corporate and individual members of the association.

He also ordered the association to discontinue the practice of interchanging statistics regarding production and granted all other decrees sought by the government.

RULING LAYS DOWN
CODE FOR BUSINESS

Washington, December 13.—The decree signed by Judge Knox, in New York, dissolving the Cement Manufacturers' Protective Association was viewed by Attorney General Daugherty tonight as laying down the "most comprehensive and definite code of business ethics" with respect to trade associations in any case yet arising under the anti-trust laws.

The decree was signed in the suit brought by the government more than two years ago under the Sherman anti-trust act and in conformity with an opinion in the case filed by Judge Knox last October.

"An effort has been made," Attorney General Daugherty said in a statement commenting upon the action, "to meet the demands of the business interests of the country for a code of ethics."

With further senate voting deferred until Monday, conversations between republican leaders and the insurgents looking to the election of a republican chairman of the committee were continued, but apparently without success. While several compromise propositions were put forward, some of the insurgents insisted that Senator Smith, of South Carolina, the ranking democrat on the committee, would be elected next Monday over Senator Cummins, republican, Iowa.

In addition to approving the committee slate, the conference endorsed the proposed creation of a veterans' committee which would handle legislation affecting former service men. The proposal previously had been approved by democratic members of the house.

Democrat Senator Now Slated To Head Important Interstate Commerce Committee.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, December 13.—The way was cleared today for house action tomorrow leading to the organization of all of its standing committees. The republicans in conference, over the protest of Representative Nelson, of Wisconsin, leader of the insurgent republicans, approved the assignment of incumbents. Democratic insurgents, already have been made and the two slates will be presented to the house by Representative Longworth, of Ohio, the majority leader.

The insurgents' objection is to the personnel of the rules committee. Mr. Nelson said his group would meet tomorrow morning to decide whether they would carry their fight to the floor. In any event, it was not expected that they would be able to bring about a situation similar to that obtaining in the senate where there still exists a deadlock over the election of the chairman of the interstate commerce committee.

Smith Seems Chosen.

With further senate voting deferred until Monday, conversations between republican leaders and the insurgents looking to the election of a republican chairman of the committee were continued, but apparently without success. While several compromise propositions were put forward, some of the insurgents insisted that Senator Smith, of South Carolina, the ranking democrat on the committee, would be elected next Monday over Senator Cummins, republican, Iowa.

Washington, December 13.—(Special.)—President Coolidge received today from Governor Clifford Walker, of Georgia, and from J. J. The president was reminded of his own interest in the welfare of the farmer, as expressed in his first message to congress, pointing out as it did the unfavorable conditions in the grain belt, and was urged to give publicity to Georgia's opportunities and natural advantages for all-year-around farming.

Jitney Drives Into Group of Children, Killing Girl; Man Dies in Auto-Trolley Accident.

As the result of three automobile accidents Thursday night, a little girl was killed, a young man died at the Atlanta hospital and a woman was badly hurt, the last two injuries being the result of crashes between automobiles and street cars.

Claude Martin, 24, of Ben Hill, Ga., was being held at the Fulton county tower Thursday night on a charge of involuntary manslaughter, following the death of Willie Lee Pritchard, 9-year-old girl, who was struck down and fatally injured by Martin's automobile in front of the child's home in Ben Hill, on the Campbellton road, about 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Martin was arrested later in the afternoon by county officers who are investigating the circumstances of the child's death. He was not allowed to make bond, it was said by tower officials.

Accident Occurred Directly in Front of the Pritchard home, while the girl's two small brothers looked on. According to the investigating officers the three children had just alighted from the machine of a neighbor. They were crossing the road, the two boys leading the way. As they reached the other side, Martin's machine suddenly appeared around a sharp curve and before the child was aware of her danger she was crushed beneath the wheels. She died shortly after being carried into her home, where physicians worked desperately to save her life.

Martin, who is a driver on the Lee street to Ben Hill jitney line, stated that he did not observe the child until he was within a few feet of her. He declared that she ran suddenly from behind the automobile, which was parked on the other side of the road, and that before he could bring his machine to a stop the girl was beneath its wheels. Officers said that Martin declared he was driving at a regular rate of speed.

EMORY R. PLANT DIES AT ATLANTA HOSPITAL.
Emory R. Plant, 27, of Hapeville, died at the Atlanta hospital Friday morning as the result of injuries received when he drove the car in which he was riding head on into a street car on Stewart avenue about midnight Thursday. The automobile was demolished.

According to witnesses, the street was clear at the time of the accident and to reason could be assigned for the man driving into the car.

TO 3 MURDERERS

Ossining, N. Y., December 13.—Three men walked to the electric chair in Sing Sing prison tonight with the laughter and songs of a musical comedy staged by other convicts ringing in their ears. The death cells in which they passed their last hours were but a few feet away from the auditorium in which "Oh, Lady, Lady," was given and they could plainly hear the applause of the audience and the voices of the performers a short time before they were executed.

The men were Abraham Becker, New York wife slayer, and George Hacker and Harry Santanillo, Binghampton murderers.

BEAVERS' FOES
PLAN TO STRIP
CHIEF OF POWER

Intend to Make Salary Dollar a Day and Create Position of "Superintendent," If Necessary.

PLEA FOR INJUNCTION
ARGUED BEFORE JUDGE

Decision by Judge Thomas on Appeal Made by Attorney for Beavers Is Expected Today.

While Judge E. D. Thomas, of Fulton superior court, pored over the records and pleadings before rendering a decision today in James L. Beavers' petition for an injunction to keep the police committee of council from ousting him as chief, advocates in council of reorganization of the police department were planning Thursday to launch an attack from a new angle.

The plan is to reduce the pay of chief of police to one dollar a day for 1924 and create a new position of "superintendent of police" in which would be vested supreme authority of the police department. Ordinances aimed to effect the changes were to be presented for introduction in council Monday in the event Judge Thomas' decision should sustain Beavers, or if Beavers should appeal from a decision in favor of the committee.

Mayor Is Silent.
The ordinance, if passed, would go to Mayor Walter A. Sims, avowed advocate of police reorganization, for final approval. The mayor declined to express his attitude toward the plan Thursday because of the indefinite shape it was in.

Attorney George C. Spence, representing Chief Beavers, and Attorney Jesse M. Wood, assistant city attorney representing the police committee, argued the Beavers position before Judge Thomas Thursday afternoon.

The point at issue was whether the police committee of council has authority to suspend Chief Beavers under charges of inefficiency.

Attorney Wood said that the recent decision of the supreme court denying petition for reorganization and upholding the committee as a quasi-judicial body empowered the committee to proceed with suspension and trial of the chief.

Attorney Spence countered that other actions at law are still pending in the courts which restrain the committee from sitting in judgment on Beavers.

Alderman Jesse W. Armistead, chairman, and Councilman Fred C. Woodall, vice chairman of the police committee, attended the hearing.

Judge Thomas took the petition under advisement and stated that he probably will announce his decision Friday after going over all the papers, petitions and court orders carefully.

Attorney Spence presented his petition for injunction to Judge Thomas at the judge's home in the early hours of Thursday morning, following the police committee's action in suspending Beavers Wednesday night. A temporary injunction, asked in the petition, was not granted, and Captain E. L. Jett, Washington chief, assumed full control of the police department Thursday as acting chief with W. F. Morris, secretary to Chief Beavers, for many years, as acting night chief.

Hearing on charges of inefficiency against Beavers is set for Tuesday night. Until that time he is technically assigned to duty in the probation office, where Alderman Armistead says the committee plans to place him if it removes him permanently as chief.

News Outside the Door
In autumn woods looking for something new, one is apt to find about the oldest living thing. Crawling over some mossy knoll is the low groundpine, or club moss, Lycopodium dendroideum, or perhaps festoon ground-pine, L. complanatum, used to make wreaths to decorate the graves of soldiers, and particularly appropriate because their family are gone back almost to the beginning of life on land. Following the pre-Gambrian age of water algae, and the plants that crept out of the sea to live ashore, the ancestors of the club mosses, some of them 85 tree-like creatures, spread over the earth.

One of their dwarfed descendants, Lycopodium Selago, found near Mount Washington and Lake Tear-of-the-Clouds, is so like the fossil of its ancestors as to leave no doubt of its aristocracy.

Another world-old group are the horse tails, Equisetum, descendants of the giant which largely composed the forests when our coal was being manufactured by Mother Nature. Their duty then was to soften the sterile earth, and dying, enrich the soil for finer plants of the future.

INSANITY CAUSED BROTHER'S DEATH,
JURORS ARE TOLD

Minister Asserts That His Father Was "Odd" After Suffering Heavy Financial Losses.

NEW LINE OF DEFENSE
ASSAILED BY BOYKIN

Texas Friends Come To Atlanta To Testify for Fox—Witnesses Describe Shooting of Coburn.

Cringing in abject terror for eleven long years under the mental lash of dread that hereditary insanity would snap the thread of his mental balance and send him to brooding seclusion or to a raging death as it had done his father and brother—

This was the line of defense which counsel for Philip E. Fox, Ku Klux Klan publicity chief and confessed slayer of Captain William S. Coburn, attorney for the William J. Simmons Klan faction, Thursday afternoon outlined for a jury in the sensational murder trial now in progress in Judge G. H. Howard's division of Fulton superior court.

Death Certificate.
The defense outlined the basis of its legal struggle for the life of Fox by submitting a death certificate to show that Jack Fox, young brother of Phil Fox, died in the throes of violent insanity, and produced witnesses to show that Fox's father had lost his mental equilibrium as the result of financial reverses.

It was further shown by former associates of Fox from Texas that while engaged in newspaper work there he was subject to spells of brooding and extreme nervousness, and that on one occasion he was discovered in an unconscious condition in the city hall.

Insanity Plea Assailed.

The state lost no time in launching its attack upon the insanity plea. Solicitor General John A. Boykin called attention of the jurors to the fact that the death certificate in the case of Jack Fox stated that the boy came to a violently insane death as the result of an unwholesome practice on his own part. At the same time, witnesses called by the defense to show that Fox's father, Samuel Fox, was "odd" and "brooding," were subjected to severe and prolonged cross-examination.

Thursday's session of the court further demonstrated the fact that the legal battle in the Fox trial will be one of the most intensely grueling in local criminal history, sensation following close upon the heel of sensation as witness after witness took the stand and unfolded the drama, the means of life or death to the slayer who watched the proceedings with twitching mouth and trembling hand.

Fox Paper Is Found.

Creating a sensation in view of the previous announcement that a thorough inspection of certain documents found in Captain Coburn's office failed to reveal the name of Fox, Lieutenant T. O. Sturdivant, of the city plainclothes force and the state's final witness, stated on cross examination by Attorney Huger Dorsey that one paper contains the name of the defendant.

This revelation was regarded as significant in view of the statement

BOOZE FLOOD POURING OVER CANADIAN LINE

Malone, N. Y., December 12.—(The Associated Press.)—A thin line of 116 prohibition enforcement agents stood on guard today to stop, if possible, the ever-increasing flow of Canadian contraband liquor through the great open spaces of a frontier of nearly 300 miles, comprising the four upper tier counties of northeastern New York. The rum consigned to the big cities down state for the Christmas holiday trade has been poured over the international border in such heavy quantities recently as to cause serious concern to the law enforcement officers.

The authorities, federal and state, have lately maintained a policy of secrecy, not only as to their plans, but as to the success or failure of their efforts to stem the tide. No secret is made of the fact that despite their efforts, there is no diminution in the flow.

The northern New York bootlegger is bold and not ashamed of his identity. One recently brought over 20 gallons of liquor, parked his car within a stone's throw of the customs house and started to peddle his wares. Another walked into the customs house and blandly asked for a permit to bring liquor over the border.

The customs house cellar is piled high with seized liquor, much of which is poisonous, authorities say.

SOLDIER BONUS BILL IS AGAIN INTRODUCED

Washington, December 12.—The soldier bonus bill which passed congress last year and was vetoed by President Harding was reintroduced today by Representative McKenzie, republican, Illinois, at the request of republican veterans in the house. It carries only minor changes from the original bill.

Kaiser Is Peeved As Crown Prince Enters Germany

Dorn, December 12.—The ex-kaiser, who had just become "Prince Wilhelm of Prussia" through a decree of the Prussian state ministry, doesn't approve particularly these days of his son, Wilhelm, whose return to Germany stirred up the monarchist question.

"You don't mean to say that you want to settle down in a German republic?" was the first comment made by the ex-kaiser when the princeling explained his intention of going back to Germany.

Wilhelm, Sr. endeavored to dissuade his son, pointing out that the return implied that he had voluntarily abdicated and was thus a blow at the monarchist movement. The crown prince persisted, however, and the ex-kaiser finally dismissed his son in anger.

Since the crown prince's hasty return to Germany, relations between father and son are very much strained, although mediators are at work to bring about a reconciliation.

FORMER DRY AGENT HELD FOR BRIBERY

Mobile, Ala., December 12.—John Thompson, former prohibition agent for the government, was arrested here today on warrants charging him with bribery, and conspiracy.

Thompson was discharged from the government service several months ago, following an investigation by secret service agents. Thompson had not made bond late this afternoon.

TRADE DIXIE CARROLL FOR LYLE BIGBEE

Chicago, December 12.—"Dixie" Carroll, outfielder of the Los Angeles Pacific Coast League club, was traded today to Louisville, of the national association, for Lyle Bigbee, outfielder. Bigbee is a brother of Carson Bigbee, of the Philadelphia Nationals.

PSEUDO SAILORS TO PLEAD GUILTY

New Orleans, December 12.—James Robert Woods, of St. Louis, also known as J. B. Shea and James Roberts, and John Phillips, of Cleveland, who masqueraded as sailors and traveled about the country for two years on stolen United States navy transportation blanks, announced in federal court today their intention of pleading guilty to the theft and forgery respectively. The statement was made after Judge Rufus Foster had signed an order of the return of Woods to Columbus, Ohio, for trial.

Mrs. Dorothy Brinkman, young woman of Omaha, Neb., and a material witness and who posed for several months as Woods' wife, court attaches said, probably will be released tomorrow if the pleas of guilty are entered. The trio was arrested in Alexandria, La., three weeks ago.

DEMOCRATS DECIDE CONVENTION SITE ON JANUARY 15

Washington, December 12.—Word of a civic, non-partisan movement in Chicago to secure the 1924 democratic national convention was received by national democratic headquarters. George Brennan, democratic national committee chairman for Illinois, telegraphed that he had conferred with civic leaders of Chicago who might cooperate with Fred W. Upham, national republican treasurer, to get the democratic national convention for Chicago. Mr. Upham has been in charge of similar efforts in the past to secure the republican convention. The democratic convention city will be selected here January 15 at a meeting of the national committee. With Chicago an active bidder, the competition will be widened to include New York and St. Louis and possibly San Francisco, Kansas City, Nashville and Atlanta. Ed Goltra, democratic national committee chairman for Missouri, visiting here today, said that St. Louis interests were preparing for an active effort in behalf of that city. Some democratic leaders here expect the competition to narrow finally to Chicago, St. Louis and New York.

PORTUGUESE CABINET TENDERS RESIGNATION

Lisbon, December 12.—(By the Associated Press.)—The Portuguese cabinet resigned today.

It was reported yesterday that the Portuguese cabinet had asked President Gomes to dissolve parliament on the ground that the hostile parliamentary majority made it impossible to govern. The resignation of the cabinet would indicate that the executive had decided not to do so. The ministry was formed on November 15 with Antonio Machado as premier.

AUTOMOBILE THIEF SLAYS POLICEMAN

Tuscaloosa, Ala., December 12.—Motorcycle Officer Starr K. Thompson was slain here last night, police believe, while he was giving chase to a man who is alleged to have stolen an automobile. It is thought that the officer overtook a man who was making way with a car and attempted to arrest him. Thompson was shot three times. He made his way to a nearby residence but collapsed and died before he could make a statement.

CHRISTMAS HOLIDAY FOR RURAL CARRIERS

Washington, December 12.—Letter carriers on the rural routes will be given all of Christmas as a holiday under a decision reached by Postmaster General New. Carriers in the cities will be given the usual half holiday.

NO CHANGES PLANNED IN NAVY YARD WAGES

Washington, December 12.—Examination by the navy wage board of reports as to wage conditions in the various naval districts has disclosed no reason for important changes in navy yard wage scales now prevailing.

Progressive Bloc Has No Terminal In Sight, Reed

Washington, December 12.—"Progressives" in congress are men "who want to go somewhere but don't know where," Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, told coal mine operators from the West Virginia smokeless fields at a meeting here today.

"There'll always be that sort of a group in congress," he added, "whose ideas are formed by a mixture of ignorance and prejudice and hope, and there'll never be a time when these unthinking can frame the legislation at Washington unless the Anglo-Saxon character of our population is changed by unchecked immigration."

All Have Lax Plans.

"You can count on sane legislation if you can count on sane facts. In the first important matter before this congress, the question of lower taxes, it'll be the fault of men like you if action isn't taken. There is hardly a member of congress today who isn't carrying around some sort of a taxation plan of his own different from those of his fellows and unless you let your representatives know what you want, Secretary Mellon's proposals for decreased taxes will be lost in the welter."

"The next great important matter is the rush of bills for government regulation of every sort of business, bills of the kind that our grandfathers would have considered coming out of a madhouse. I'm not talking about regulation of railroads, though there is much there that you are not watching. When the interstate commerce commission refuses a man the right to put a sidetrack connecting his coal mine with a railroad—and it has done so, though it is reconsidering what it shall do finally—you have despotism."

Reed's Gross.

"You will hear the anthracite industry discussed in congress this winter out of an immensity of ignorance and I advise you to watch closely what is done because the fact is the majority of men who will vote upon that question do not know that there is any difference between the conditions under which anthracite is produced and the conditions under which bituminous coal is produced."

The operators today reelected R. H. Gross, of New York, president of their association, and George R. Collins, of Charleston, W. Va., treasurer.

PSYCHOLOGIST AIDS IN SELECTING JURY

New York, December 12.—A psychologist is directing the defense in the selection of jurors to try Ernest Vetter and his young wife, Marie, for murder.

Seated in the first row of spectators the psychologist has carefully scanned the features and noted the action of prospective jurors, looking for sympathetic natures. If he decides that a talesman does not possess one, he advises defense counsel by signal language.

The Vettors are charged with having allured Alonzo J. Storey, a former admirer of New York, president of their association, and George R. Collins, of Charleston, W. Va., treasurer.

UNCOVER OLD WELL, SCENE OF DEATH RIOT

Eufaula, Ala., December 12.—(Special.)—While grading the business section of Eufaula, Ala., city street forces uncovered a historic old well which was filled in about 40 years ago.

Around this well a political riot occurred on November 3, 1874, in which three negroes were killed and other persons injured. The riot occurred during election times in reconstruction days and the finding of the old well, the gathering place of his drinking water, has brought to mind reminiscences of other days.

DAYTON MAKES OFFER TO TRAPSHOOTERS

Chicago, December 12.—The Amateur Trapshooting association today at its annual meeting had before it an offer of eight citizens of Dayton, Ohio, of 70 acres at Dayton as a permanent shooting ground. The offer was made by the association following the conclusion of the meeting tomorrow, F. R. Patterson and Dr. W. A. Ewing are among those making the offer.

George S. McCarty, Newfield, N. J., was elected president, and U. R. Brooks, Columbia, S. C., first vice president.

SOVIET PLANS BOYCOTT AGAINST SWITZERLAND

Moscow, December 12.—The government has decided to carry out a boycott against Switzerland because of the acquittal of the Swiss engineer, Maurice Conradi, charged with the assassination at Lausanne last May of M. Vorovsky, soviet representative, and has instructed the soviet representatives abroad to grant no visas to Swiss citizens. Meanwhile the Russian authorities will investigate the whereabouts of Swiss residing in Russia, with a view to their expulsion. Russia will also boycott all Swiss goods and will require a certificate of origin of goods suspected to be of Swiss origin.

Only a Few Days More for the Great Red Letter Bible Yet Remain

The closing advertisements of the Big Red Letter Bible now appearing in these columns are bringing the coupon-holders in increased numbers every day. There are doubtless many readers who have had it in mind to take advantage of our unusual offer at some future time. But they have not considered that the supply of books which we were allotted by contract is limited, nor are they familiar with the fact that owing to an unexpected and enormous demand, which developed even in the early days of the campaign—the number we secured has dwindled to a few remaining copies. We hope we have enough to last the next few days—but it seems doubtful. We may be obliged to withdraw the coupon at any time. But while the supply lasts, of course, coupons will be duly honored.—(adv.)

Tempting

As pure as fresh butter—smooth and creamy—Duke's Home-made Mayonnaise is a perfect blend of all the good things that go into mayonnaise. It is a real raw egg and oil mayonnaise, absolutely uncooked. You don't know how good mayonnaise can be until you have tasted "Duke's."

Russian Dressing and Relish

are both made with Mrs. Duke's mayonnaise and are equally delicious. Such a variety of tempting sandwiches and salads can be made with them—in just a few minutes time.

Try stuffing eggs with the Relish and you'll like them better that way. A savory cocktail sauce is made in a jiffy with the Russian Dressing. You'll like both these dainties just as much as the mayonnaise.

CHRISTMAS PAGEANT PLANS PROGRESSING

With assurances of active co-operation and assistance of many clubs and associations in Atlanta the annual community Christmas pageant, "The Light of the World," enters the final lap of preparation with every promise of success, according to announcement Thursday by Mrs. Earl Sherwood Jackson, director of the pageant.

Headquarters have been established in room 388, Forsyth building, and Mrs. Legare Davis, in charge of costumes, may be found at the office at all hours during the day to lend any assistance in the matter of costumes. Participants may also phone the office, Walnut 1640, for information concerning the pageant.

Posters calling attention to the pageant will be given by the Girls' high school, and the full support of the school was assured the committee of arrangements by Miss Jessie Muse of the festival committee at a meeting Thursday morning at the city hall.

Mrs. E. D. McDonald, president of the Parent-Teacher council, and Mrs. Howard McCutcheon, head of the President's club of the Parent-Teacher association, were present at the meeting and assured the committee that Atlanta schools would furnish groups of carolers.

Mrs. McCutcheon is in charge of the group which will take part in the scene at Herod's court. Mrs. McCutcheon was selected as princess for this scene.

The Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs selects the queen each year, and Mrs. T. T. Stevens, president of the federation, stated at the meeting that this announcement will be made later this week.

The Little Theater Guild has volunteered to assist with this community undertaking, and members will take an active part in the pageant, in costume and in other preparatory work.

Miss Sarah Adele Eastlack will be in charge of a group of girls from the high school, and the full support of the school was assured the committee of arrangements by Miss Jessie Muse of the festival committee at a meeting Thursday morning at the city hall.

THE CONSTITUTION, ATLANTA, GA., FRIDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1923.

MITAH SPEAKAH

BY RALPH T. JONES

Mistah Speakah—
Move to reconsider the motion for the previous question on the motion to reconsider the motion to adjourn.

Figure that out yourself then rule it out of order.

Parliamentary battles over the rules are primarily the reason for the existence of such an officer as speaker of the house.

Personally, however, that struggle on the floor Thursday afternoon appeared as going a trifle far. When defeat is inevitable, it is generally regarded as graceful to accept the unfavorable fact with proper good humor, probably. However, the opposition was not quite as eager for supper as some of the majority.

It was a pity that Wimberly, of Toombs, didn't get his vote recorded on the resolution of instructions to the conference committee on the Lankford bill. He tried hard enough, but every time he asked unanimous consent to record his vote and re-voice, Wimberly, of Toombs, objected. According to the gentleman from Laurens, the gentleman from Toombs had "impaired his veracity." If he did, however, he did it privately, for the only public remark he made was a suggestion that rule books be distributed immediately after the gentleman from Laurens had been ruled out of order on a motion. That, it seems, was impugning the gentleman's knowledge of the rules, rather than his veracity.

However, the gentleman from Laurens absolutely refused to allow the gentleman from Toombs to vote and so, despite the fact that night classes in Fulton High were awaiting his presence, and when the gentleman from Toombs tried to vote quietly and slip out the gentleman from Laurens presented that. It was hard, mates, but after all the vote was necessary. For the gentleman from Toombs had said he would have voted aye and the aye vote was 140 to 22 nay on the final vote. Which should be margin enough to convince anyone they are defeated.

However, the battle of the Wimberly added a touch of color and suspense to an otherwise monotonous roll call and that, at least, is what is to be grateful for in the dull routine of legislative existence.

COMPROMISE NEAR IN INCOME TAX FIGHT

phatically on record as being willing to compromise in order that taxation reform may be enacted before the special session comes to an end, it thus goes on record and places responsibility for final failure to agree, if it comes, upon the senate. This, at least, was the opinion of the majority membership of the house as frequently and freely expressed during debate on the resolution.

The seventh conference committee, which will represent the house backed by this resolution of instructions, consists of Representatives Beck, of Carroll; Dykes, of Dooly, and Howard, of Chatham. The committee from the senate is composed of King, of the eleventh; Redwine, of the twenty-sixth; and Garlick, of the seventeenth.

The aye and nay vote on the resolution of instructions to this committee was regarded generally by the house as one of the most important roll-calls of the entire session, inasmuch as it put every member voting on record as to whether he was willing to sink his personal preferences and accept a compromise in order to bring relief to the admittedly critical situation on state finances. This general opinion was voiced by Judge Aubrey, representative from Barrow county, in explaining his vote when he said that he "was proud to belong to a body big enough to put the greatest good for the state above their individual preferences on minor points." This statement drew forth prolonged applause from the house.

The vote on the resolution was as follows:

For adoption:
Adair, Adams, of Franklin; Adams, of Toombs; Anderson, of Camden; Aubrey, of Barrow; Beck, of Carroll; Bennett, of Blaine; Boswell, of Branch; Brannen, of Callaway; Camp, of Campbell; Carr, of Carter; Childs, of Cherokee; Clark, of Colleton; Cleveland, of Covington; Cox, of Daniel; of Troup; Davis, of Floyd; Davis, of Thomas; DeFoor, of Dooly; Dwyer, of Elbert; Ellis, of Ennis; Evans, of Screven; Fleming, of Columbia; Fleming, of Hancock; Fletcher, of Forsyth; Fox, of Gilmer; Golden, of Greer; Griner, of Groves; Haddock, of Hamrick; Harrell, of Harris; Harrison, of Hatcher; of Burke; Head, of Hillhouse; Hines, of Deatur; Hines, of Sumter; Holden, of Holton; Howard, of Chatham; of Howard; of Long; Howard, of Screven; Hulme, of Jenkins; Johnson, of Bacon; Johnson, of Forsyth; Jones, of Cook; Jones, of Coweta; Jones, of Floyd; Jones, W. R., of Meriwether; Jordan, of Kepton; Kirkland, of Knight; Latham, of Lyons; McClure, of McCrory; McGarity, of Michael; McMullan, of Mann; McNeill, of Meigs; Moore, of Milledge; Mullis, of Napier; Norman, of Colquitt; Norman, of Henry; Orr, of Owen; Pafford, of Parrish; Penland, of Perkins; of Habersham; Perry, of McIntosh; Perryman, of Phillips; of Jasper; Phillips, of Telfair; Pickens, of Pope; Price, of Reville; Roberts, of Robertson; Russell, of Shelby; Shertlesworth, of Simpson; Singleton, of Smith; of Jefferson; Smith, of Lamar; Spence, of Stiles; Stiles, of Steno; Stone, of Strickland; Swindle, of Tatum; Toole, of Tyson; Tripp, of Vaughn; Warren, of Way; West, of Whitworth; Williams, of Wilson; Wimberly, of Toombs; Winship, of Wood; Woodruff, of Worthy—140.

Against adoption:
Barrett, Bird, Bowden, Bozeman, Curry, of Wilkinson; Fowler, Hatcher, of Muscogee; Hyman, of Lindsey; Miller, of New Paris; Peck, of Peter; Pitts, of Riley; Rowe, of Stewart; Suttie, of Tappin; Wimberly, of Laurens—22.

138 Votes Needed.
Speaker Neill has ruled that in event the agreement reached in conference on the Lankford bill differs in any respect from the form in which the bill was originally passed by the house, a constitutional two-thirds majority of the membership of the house, or 138 members, will be required to vote acceptance of the report.

Administration leaders pointed with elation on Thursday night to the fact that this number with two to spare was secured on the vote to adopt the resolution and it is freely predicted that, provided all members remain in attendance Friday, the same vote can be secured on final acceptance of this agreement, if the senate agrees to accede. Thus, in one other particular, the question of passage or non-passage of the bill is put squarely upon the senate, to enact the law or take the blame for its failure.

Before passing on this resolution, the house accepted a senate amendment to the general tax act restoring the one and a half per cent tax rate on gross insurance premiums. This is the rate in the old law, but it had been raised by the house to two and a half per cent.

Houses Still at Issue.
The two houses are still at issue on a number of senate amendments to the general tax act, though both have receded on several items. The bill is now in the hands of conference committees and, inasmuch as it is generally conceded that the matters not yet agreed upon are virtually minor issues, it is believed that agreement on this bill finally will be reached.

Whether or not the assembly can adjourn sine die Friday night remains in doubt. If the seventh committee on the Lankford bill reaches an agreement which both houses can accept, it is believed possible. In any event, it is the belief and hope of a large majority of the members that Saturday at least will see the end of the session.

During the afternoon session Representative McMichael rose to a point of personal privilege and introduced a resolution asking an investigation of actions of the state highway department which amount, he said, virtually to ignoring the majority report of the investigating committee which sat last summer, and adopting the minority report signed by himself. The speaker ruled that this resolution could be introduced only during the period for introduction of new business and that it would then have to lie on the table for one day before its second reading.

Ennis Bill Passed.
Lacking only Governor Clifford Walker's signature before it becomes law, the Ennis bill providing for creation of a state department of revenue to collect delinquent taxes was passed by the senate and house Thursday afternoon, following agreement on certain disputed provisions by conference committees of the two bodies.

Governor Walker signed the measure, he asserted, when it reaches him Thursday.

In order that the bill might receive the requisite constitutional majority, President George H. Carswell, of the senate, cast his vote in favor of it, boosting the total to 26 for and 16 opposed in the upper house. The measure received unanimous action in the house, not a single vote being cast against it.

Two amendments which caused a deadlock between the two bodies were agreed upon by the conference committees, the senate receding from its position on placing the department under the supervision of the state tax commissioner, while the house compromised on its stand for a 25 per cent penalty clause, agreeing to reduce this to 20 per cent. The senate had previously amended the bill so as to reduce this penalty to 15 per cent.

Vote on Measure.

The recorded aye and nay vote in the upper house was as follows: R. J. H. Adams, Charles S. Arnow, B. W. Boyd, Joseph B. Duke, J. M. Garrison, Thomas F. Green, R. E. A. Hamby, A. H. Henderson, Jr., J. Luther Horn, W. C. Hüller, G. A. Jones, G. J. Keith, W. B. Kennedy, J. H. Kennon, W. R. Little, Frank Loftin, T. S. Mason, E. C. Miller, Louis S. Moore, W. W. Moody, A. N. McLeod, W. B. Owens, John R. Phillips, J. M. Spence, Arthur Whitaker and President George H. Carswell. Total, 26.

Against the bill: Senators J. C. Beauchamp, J. B. Chastain, Boyce Franklin, Sr., Carroll R. Garlick, E. L. Grantham, W. R. Hodges, E. R. King, G. W. Lankford, P. B. Latimer, Henry C. Morgan, Stephen Pace, C. H. Parker, R. D. Redwine, G. C. Smith, Ernest M. Smith, and Glenn Stovall. Total, 16.

Those not voting included: Senators Howard E. Coats, John Campbell, David J. B. Douglas, James L. Gilson, E. W. Gilstrap, Emmett F. Johnson, L. D. Passmore, Fred A. Smith. Total, 8.

Ennis Is Pleased.

Representative Ennis, author of the measure, after the assembly had adopted his bill, expressed deep satisfaction over the results of his efforts for collection of delinquent taxes. He has worked valiantly for the last two years in two legislatures to have his bill adopted.

The Ennis bill provides for creation of a revenue department for the state whose duty will be to collect all delinquent taxes of every kind due the state. It prescribes that this department shall be under the supervision of a commissioner of revenue, at a salary of $4,000 per year, to be appointed by the governor; and to provide for the appointment of six deputy commissioners at salaries of $200 per month each, whose duties shall be to look after collection of delinquent taxes. A penalty of 20 per cent against delinquents is provided to pay costs of collection.

Committee Reports.

Immediately after passage of the Ennis bill the sixth conference committee appointed to attempt a compromise on the Lankford income tax measure reported to the senate that it was unable to agree and asked to be discharged. A seventh committee was appointed immediately.

Before adjournment Thursday afternoon the senate took up discussion of the house amendments to the general tax act. It is expected that these amendments will be satisfactorily adjusted in the upper house and that the general tax act will be adopted by both bodies Friday.

Amendments at Issue.

Among the amendments from which the senate refused to recede in the general tax act, was one to levy a 10 per cent tax on boxing matches and to create a state boxing commission. The house accepted the senate amendment reducing the tax to gross insurance premiums from 25 to 20 per cent, as provided by the lower body, to 11 1/2 per cent with an abatement clause. The senate insisted on the resolution providing for appointment of a commission to conduct an exhaustive survey of the free trade question in the commonwealth of the state, which the house had passed by substitute. The house is scheduled to act on this resolution again Friday.

to the labor, woman's suffrage and alcoholic liquor traffic committees. Representative Weald, farmer-labor, Minnesota, will serve on the invalid, pensions and woman suffrage committees, and Representative Kvale, independent, Minnesota, will serve on the public buildings and grounds and industrial arts and exhibitions committees.

After adjournment tomorrow the house will recess until Tuesday. It is expected that none of the committees will be able to organize and report before the Christmas holidays. Mr. Longworth announced to the house today that it was planned to recess from December 21 to January 3.

Blows His Head Off By Pulling Trigger Of Gun With Toes

Statesboro, Ga., December 13.—(Special.)—Dan R. Groover, 38, father of six children, killed himself late last night by pulling the trigger of his shotgun with his toes, blowing his head off. Dependency over ill-health was assigned as the reason for the act. He had been ill at his home near Jimpas for some time. His wife and children were awakened by the report of the gun, and rushed into the room to find the head severed from the body.

WIFE SEEKS HUSBAND
VICTIM OF AMNESIA

Mrs. Georgia Jossey, 34 Indiana avenue, has applied to the Associated Charities in an effort to locate her husband, William Reeves Jossey, whom she believes to be the victim of amnesia. She stated that she believes her husband, as has been the case on other occasions, has become lost in the city and is unable to find his way home.

Mr. Jossey is 68 years old and has white hair and blue eyes. He is five feet, ten inches tall and is of slight build. He is an interior decorator, and Mrs. Jossey says it is probable that he has gone to Florida to secure a position.

General Butler Is Given Leave; Takes Civil Job

Washington, D. C., December 13.—Secretary Denby announced today that by direction of the president he had granted leave to Brigadier General Stanley D. Butler, marine corps, for one year, effective January 1, next, which will permit the officer to accept the position of director of public safety of Philadelphia for that period.

General Butler was to have commanded the large detachment of marines which will play a part in the coming fleet maneuvers and exercises in southern waters in January and February. Secretary Denby said that Brigadier General Eli K. Cole, now stationed at Parris Island, S. C., would take General Butler's place in command of the marine expeditionary force for that purpose.

to believe it will be a matter of but a short time when the traitorous military leaders are overthrown and peace and order restored throughout the country. A revolution in Mexico has prospered only when it has been fought by the people in the interest of liberty and against oppressors. Traitors have not a chance to control the government of Mexico today.

"I am in this city of Guanajuato to make a personal inspection of the troops about to depart for Guadalajara to combat the traitorous forces of the traitor, General Estrada. With these troops are some of the most distinguished leaders of the republic, among them the General Joaquin Amaro, Luis Guiterrez, Rodolfo L. "The troops are in the finest spirits, enthusiastically loyal to the government, and in my judgment, there can be little doubt of the early and successful issue of the campaign.

DE LA HUERTA CLAIMS GROWING STRENGTH

Brownsville, Texas, December 13.—Continued accessions of strength to the Huerta forces in Mexico were claimed in an official report received here today from the De la Huerta provisional government at Vera Cruz.

In the state of Tamaulipas only three points, Matamoros, Nuevo Laredo and Victoria, the capital, were reported in the control of hands of federal troops. Revolts were alleged to have occurred in all island towns, and the greater part of the state was said to be under the control of Governor Lopez de Lara, who fled from Victoria.

General Estrada has crossed the border from the United States near Laredo and is now reported with the revolutionary forces in Tamaulipas. He is expected to be placed on the staff of Governor Lopez de Lara and may direct personally operations against points held by the federal authorities. In all the Huerta forces claim more than 1,200 troops in Tamaulipas, and assert that hundreds of volunteers are joining daily.

Shipments of ammunition are being received from Vera Cruz through Tampico.

Gives Assignments.

Colonel Grimaldo is in command of a large detachment guarding the Mexican national lines between Monterey and Victoria. Colonel Aguirre is west of Tampico. Xicotencatl, where there are many American colonies. Colonel Feliciano Garcia commands the Hidalgo and Colonel Garcia, of Matamoros, commands a large detachment at San Fernando, 65 miles below Matamoros. Colonels Julio Davila and Cano are in charge at Burgos, Cuernavaca and Mexico, north of Victoria.

General Jose Vallejo is at the head of the movement in Campeche. A message to the revolutionary headquarters stated that Wednesday morning the 40th battalion, composed of well-trained troops. He also was reported to have 2,000 volunteers who will be armed. The army was sent to Campeche several weeks ago by the federal government but were seized by the revolutionaries.

The Huerta forces claim to be in control practically all of Campeche and Tabasco and to be attempting to subvert the state of Yucatan.

REVOLT OF CONGRESS CLAIMED BY REBELS

San Antonio, Texas, December 13.—By horseback, airplane, automobile and some by rail through the United States, the members of the Mexican national congress are leaving Mexico City of Vera Cruz to reconvene for the purpose of deposing President Alvaro Obregon as president, according to Ruben Vizarra, president of the chamber of deputies, who arrived here last night en route to Vera Cruz.

The state that the national congress had been functioning since the revolt under military pressure. He asserted that a quorum was not present and that all acts since the revolution were null and void.

Some of the members are having difficulty in leaving Mexico City. Vizarra said, and about 25 of them are still there.

The most important development in the situation is the spread of the revolt to the west coast. Navarré, formerly Tepic, has joined the revolutionary forces, according to reports received here. The Light Colima and Sinaloa are joining the revolution rapidly. It is reported through private sources.

Ramon Kios, governor of the federal district of Mexico, is in San Antonio, and, according to La Prensa, Mexican language newspaper, is on his way to Washington with credentials as ambassador from Mexico and high commissioner and expects to call upon President Coolidge and ask full and immediate recognition of the Obregon government. Reports from Mexico City state that Governor Ross will not recognize the Obregon government, but that P. Elias Calles will not be a candidate for the presidency.

GENERAL PINA REPORTED EXECUTED

Nogales, Ariz., December 13.—Rebel forces at Manzanillo, Mexico, have captured and executed General Miguel Pina, of the federal army, who was returning to Mexico City from Lower California, where he had been on a mission for President Obregon, according to advices received in official circles here today.

JALAPA FEDERALS REPORTED DEFEATED

San Antonio, Texas, December 13.—Reports received here state that only a few hours ago General Villa Nueva Garza annihilated the federal forces in Jalapa, occupying that place after 37 hours' fighting. Among the prisoners taken were Governor Casarin, several local deputies, General Berlanga and Colonel Mayer, all of whom will be tried by military courts in strict conformity to law.

Eighty were killed, 115 wounded, 320 taken prisoners and 700 horses, 200 rifles and a large supply of ammunition were taken, according to telegrams.

Detailed reports of the military contingents in arms against the Obregon government have been made public by Mexican refugees here upon receipt of messages from Huertista headquarters in Vera Cruz.

General Enrique Estrada, operating in Jalisco, has under his command four regiments and three battalions, it is said. He is reported to have advised the revolutionists at Vera Cruz by radio that he had turned against the Obregon government with the following troops: General Alfredo Garcia with 1,500 men in Zacatecas; General Rafael Berlanga with 1,200 men between Jalisco and Colima; Colonel Miguel Ulloa with 600 men in Guanajuato; General Estrada himself, a thirty-seventh battalion, thirty-seventh regiment, ninety-fourth battalion, eighty-eight regiment and a regiment of artillery, and General Samuel Santos with the body of generals and officers known as the practical school of cavalry with a total contingent of 1,200.

The forces of General Carlos Vidal in Aguascalientes disavowed his orders and compelled him to flee with his aide. Forces under General Cesar Moya did likewise, making Moya a prisoner after wounding him. Ten airplanes, including the pilots, joined the revolt, headed by General Estrada. Gahay in Queretaro seconded the movement and arrested the governor. General Gallegos, chief of the military operations in Guanajuato, has joined the revolt in Celaya.

Campeche, Tabasco and Chiapas with the entire armed forces stationed there are under orders of General Estrada and Puerto Mexico and Frontera are said to be opened to receive the rebel forces.

Enrique Seldonor and Teodoro Frazzetta have been designated as consuls in New York and New Orleans, respectively.

DECISIVE BATTLE EXPECTED SOON

Mexico City, December 13.—(By the Associated Press.)—It is generally felt here that a decisive battle between the Sanchez forces and the troops loyal to President Obregon will be fought on the Vera Cruz front near where Carranza was defeated by Sanchez in 1919.

The government continues to concentrate soldiers in that district to oppose the advance of the rebels.

President Obregon has rejected the mediation offer of General Angel Flores, governor of Sinaloa, asserting that the question between the government and the insurgents has become military rather than political inasmuch as the rebel leaders are army men who have failed in their military duties.

Antonio Manero, head of the monetary commission branch at Merida, Yucatan, is said to have fled to New York with more than 1,000,000 pesos.

WARNING OF FLOOD ON QUACHITA ISSUED

New Orleans, December 13.—A flood warning for the Ouachita river territory in Arkansas was issued today by the district weather bureau here. Rainfall of one to four inches over the Ouachita basin during the last few days will result in a stage of from 30 to 32 feet at Camden, Ark., December 15, 16, the warning said. The flood stage at Camden is 30 feet.

Southerners Cheer Littleton Speech Lauding Coolidge

New York, December 13.—More than 800 members of the New York Southern Society, former southerners now living in New York, were brought to their feet in an outburst of enthusiasm last night, when Martin W. Littleton, a democrat, as toastmaster at the society's annual dinner, referred to President Coolidge's speech as "the utterance of a man who said, 'I stand here.'"

"What can we say of that great man from New England who succeeded President Harding?" he said, "that silent man? A man who said to Russia: 'Return to your old ways and I will trade with you.' Who said of the bonus, 'I do not favor a bonus.' Who said of the league of nations, 'It is a foreign agency.' The incident is closed."

"I am not making this speech in favor of a northern president—I am making it in favor of an American president," continued Mr. Littleton. "I have said this because as an American citizen I thought I ought to say it."

Mr. Littleton's tribute to the president came at the end of the dinner. The previous speakers had been United States Senator K. D. McKellar, of Tennessee, and Irving S. Cobb.

DOMESTIC WARS SLACK UP SOME

London, December 13.—Domestic upheavals in Britain, caused by the hectic life of the war period, are gradually subsiding.

Divorce statistics just issued here show that the number of petitions for divorce filed last year was 13 per cent lower than in 1921, 42 per cent lower than in 1920 and 48 per cent lower than in 1919, when the figure was higher than in any previous year.

But England, as yet, has not seen the blissful married relations that prevailed before the war. In 1922 more than 2,000 divorce actions were begun, in contrast to a yearly average of 921 for the period between 1903 and 1907.

AMERICANS TO PROBE GERMAN SITUATION

New York, December 13.—Major General Henry T. Allen, chairman of the American committee for relief of German children, today made public his plans to visit Germany.

In reply to a message from President Ebert, declaring that a committee of two Americans would be sent to make a survey of the existing situation in that country.

Dr. Haven Emerson, professor of public health administration at Columbia university, and Dr. Ernest M. Gellert, professor of medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, had been selected.

ADHERENTS OF FORD FILE HIS PETITION

Lansing, Mich., December 13.—A nominating petition to place the name of Henry Ford on the democratic ballot in the preferential presidential primaries next April was filed in the secretary of state's office today by James W. Helme, democrat of Adrian.

The petition carries 107 signatures, the requirement being 100. A check showed that 25 of the signatures failed to furnish street addresses, invalidating their signatures.

The secretary of state announced he would ask Mr. Helme and keep the petitions on file.

AGED FARMER KILLED AND HIS SON WOUNDED

Holly Springs, Miss., December 12.—Frank McFerrin, 70-year-old farmer, is dead, his son, Lee, is wounded and Joe Brent is in jail here, as the result of a shooting affray at Port's camp late today. According to reports to the sheriff's office, the McFerrins were in a store when Brent entered and opened fire with two pistols.

The motive of the shooting is unknown. Brent surrendered, but declined to discuss the affair.

PRICE OF CRUDE OIL ADVANCED FIVE POINTS

Tulsa, Okla., December 13.—An increase in the price of crude oil from the north Texas fields ranging from 5 cents to 30 cents was announced today by the Texas company.

FEDERAL COURT SMASHES TRUST

deceit which would be equitable and fair in all respects.

Will Be Legal Signpost.

"Just as the Standard Oil and tobacco trusts are recognized as landmarks in the law with respect to combinations brought about by consolidations, so will the cement decree serve as a guiding principle by which trade associations and the members thereof must be governed in their future activities."

Holding the association, whose membership includes the principal cement manufacturers of the country, to be an unlawful combination in restraint of trade, the decree enjoins the defendant companies from effecting any "similar combination or organization having the same purpose and effect."

Among other association practices enjoined are the establishment of "uniform mill base prices" and "arbitrary freight basing points other than the points from which shipments are actually made." In connection with the latter restraint, the defendants also are enjoined from selling their product "at a b. point of delivery exclusively."

Raps Uniform Rates.

Other practices enjoined in the decree include establishment of "uniform rates of discount or uniform terms for payment of bills;" limiting the quantity of cement to be shipped to a dealer within a specified time; prohibiting the "diversion or so-called misuse of cement sold on specific job contracts;" maintaining a uniform differential in the price of cement sold to dealers and contractors; fixing or suggesting the amount of commission or profit dealers should be required to make; regulating or limiting the production of cement or the amount of stock to be kept on hand.

The members were further restrained from "limiting the time within which quotations must be accepted and deliveries made;" and refusing to grant extensions in time of deliveries. Making price changes effective "as of the date quotations are written;" and guaranteeing prices against decline were other acts enjoined in the decree.

The decree set forth specifically that none of the above restraints applied to any of the defendant companies individually.

A section enjoining the companies from circulating among themselves "so-called freight books showing freight rates on cement from any arbitrarily established freight basing point to the points of delivery throughout the territory comprising their market," was defined as not prohibiting the defendants from maintaining or subscribing to a "traffic bureau to furnish rates or rules of transportation that may be contained in any public schedule or tariff." All rates so furnished, however, shall be the "actual rates between points of actual shipment and delivery," the decree said.

While setting forth the right of the defendants to maintain or subscribe to a credit bureau for the sole purpose of furnishing information as to the credit of prospective purchasers, the decree enjoined them collectively and individually from "agreeing to refuse to make sales to particular customers and from agreeing upon circumstances or conditions which shall exclude customers from being extended credit."

The court expressly retained jurisdiction over the case for the purpose of enforcing the decree and also enabling the government to apply for "modification or enlargement of its provisions on the ground that they are inadequate or to give the defendants the same opportunity should the provisions "become inappropriate or unnecessary."

A Home Built of CONCRETE BRICK Improves with Age

Time only strengthens the bond between CONCRETE BRICK and the Portland Cement Mortar in which they are laid. These similar materials cling together in a vise-like grip that will never let go.

So why not build your home of CONCRETE BRICK? Why not dwell comfortably with walls that are as strong, durable and fire-resisting as those of the concrete-built Atlanta skyscrapers, schools, hotels and factories with which you are familiar?

CONCRETE BRICK are handy building units of solid concrete. Laid one upon the other in the grip of Portland Cement Mortar they become as a wall of solid concrete—a continuation of the rock-like concrete foundation upon which they are built.

A home built of CONCRETE BRICK is heat and cold resisting, comfortable and secure, proof against the menaces of fire, storm, dampness, decay.

Start with building economy. CONCRETE BRICK never shrink, warp or twist. And they are uniform in size and shape, requiring less mortar to lay. Build your home of CONCRETE BRICK.

C. P. BYRD BUYS WALTON BUILDING

Sale of the Walton building, the nine-story office structure at the corner of Walton and Peachtree streets, to C. P. Byrd was announced Thursday by Haas-Howell company, representing Leonard Haas, trustee. A parcel of land on Peachtree street, near Baker street, and a lot in the rear of Ivy street, were given in part payment for the office building, according to the announcement. The lot on Peachtree street is 62x250 feet. Exact terms of the deal were not made public, but is known to have involved both cash and property.

The Walton building occupies a lot 500x100 and is located in the center of Atlanta's business district. Conservative estimates of the value of the building are placed at one-half million dollars, it is said.

The Haas-Howell firm handled the deal for Leonard Haas, well-known Atlanta attorney who was trustee for former owners of the office building.

ELK PERFORMERS EAGER FOR RISE OF FIRST CURTAIN

Eager for the rise of the curtain Monday evening at the Atlanta theater, members of the cast in the "1923 Elks' Revue" and those to take part in the "Fashion Show" to be staged Monday night, are now taking final rehearsals for the performances. The entire proceeds of the three night performances will be devoted to the Elks' fund.

Prominent among those who will take part in the minstrel number are "Wild Bert" Plinn, dean of southern minstrel; G. B. Adair, another blackface comedian of note; Sidney Wing, George Kneuer, John Byrne, E. H. ("Fatty") Elrod and A. S. Smith. All are popular Atlantaans who have been prominently identified with amateur theatricals for many years.

John Hinton and Thomas Dendy, lyric tenor and baritone, respectively, are two of several outstanding stars who sing ballads, sentimental songs and the usual jazz solos heard in minstrel numbers. The entire cast is composed of the best and most talented Atlantaans, all of whom are members of Atlanta Lodge of Elks with the exception of ladies taking part in the musical comedy, and there are either wives, sisters or daughters of members of the local Elks' lodge.

Albert H. Dunn is business manager and Cliff Daniel stage director of the revue.

MORROW COMPANY PLACED IN HANDS OF U. S. RECEIVER

Petition for involuntary bankruptcy against the Morrow Transfer & Storage company and for a receiver was filed in the district federal court by Atlanta creditors of the company Thursday.

Creditors, as listed in the petition, and the amounts due each are: Prior Tire company, $850; Crumley-Sharp Hardware company, $672; Worford Oil company, $7,000; a total listed liability account of $9,222. The creditors, through their attorneys, Mayson & Johnson, allege that the transfer company committed an act of bankruptcy during November by securing certain creditors in preference to others.

SIX GEORGIANS HELP U. S. KEEP GUARD IN HAITI

Starting on a period of service in the ever-sunny tropics, Howard C. Booth, of Manchester; Paul Dodson, of Alamo; Robert Lee Jordan, of Poulton; Gordon Anderson, of Brunswick; William James Jackson, of Greensboro, and James K. Smith, of Tallulah Falls, a new party with the United States marines stationed in Haiti. News from the Georgia boys was received a few days ago by Captain C. A. Winn, in charge of the local marine corps recruiting station, postoffice building, the office where the six Georgians enlisted several months ago.

A small force of marines has been on duty in Haiti since 1911, when the soldiers of the sea landed in that country to restore order during a revolution. During their occupation of Haiti, the sea soldiers have established schools, aided in building roads and public works and have encouraged agriculture and thrift among the natives.

Druid Hills Church Plans Organization Of Men's Association

A men's association of the Druid Hills Presbyterian church, to promote various phases of church work, will be organized tonight at a meeting at the church. About 100 men are expected.

Preceding the meeting, the elders and deacons of the church will give a supper at 6:30 o'clock in the men's Bible class room. The supper will be served by the young women of the church and a musical program will be furnished by the Sunday school orchestra, with Miss Margaret White, violinist; Mrs. R. S. Bosley, contralto, and J. D. Swagerty, baritone.

PLANS ARE COMPLETE FOR CHRISTMAS TREE

Arrangements are being completed for the Christmas tree to be given at the Auditorium-Armory Friday afternoon, December 21, from 3 to 5 o'clock. It was announced Wednesday by Mrs. W. C. Bailey, of 384 Capitol avenue, a member of the committee in charge. The tree is being arranged for the benefit of the poor children of Atlanta. A musical program for children will be arranged and gift packages distributed.

CHURCH AT DECATUR WILL HONOR EAKES

Rev. and Mrs. G. M. Eakes, who have been assigned to the pastorate of the First Methodist church of Decatur for the fourth consecutive year, will be the guests of honor at a dinner to be given by the board of stewards of the church at 7 o'clock Friday night in the new Sunday school building. The board of stewards has named the following officers for the coming year: G. M. Addy, chairman; J. Howell Green, vice chairman; George E. Everett, treasurer, and Miss Beulah Harris, secretary.

'Studies in Colors' Will Be Big Fanfare Feature

An outstanding feature in Yaarab Chanters' Fanfare to be given at the Atlanta theater Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week, will be "Studies in Colors" as presented by Misses Lucile Amaker, Sarah Bosworth, Mary Annie McGinty, Mary Jane Reese, Shirley Small, Ruth Brook, Paula Devoll and Thelma Chalmers, with Dr. Malcolm Turner and his corps of assistants handling the intricate and detailed electrical effects.

Dr. Turner's electrical lighting effects of the very highest and most artistic types, and the chanters are being congratulated that Dr. Turner has offered the services of his entire staff and his own electrical equipment to augment that already carried in the regular theater. Another interesting feature of the fanfare performances will be the presentation of "The Good Old Summer" in which the talents of Misses Louise Mahoney and Catherine Lyle are displayed to good advantage. The chanters will be assisted in the presentation of their fanfare by a levy of beautiful girls. The entire production is under the personal direction of Perrin Somers, theatrical professional of New York city, who has brought special scenery, beautiful costumes, snappy songs and most interesting sketches for the Atlanta performances.

The chanters will attend the regular meeting of the Civic club at its noon luncheon Friday and sing for the club. The chanters' organization has adopted this as one of its means to keep the forthcoming performances of their fanfare before the clubs of the city. It is not the intention to sell tickets at the luncheon.

Interest Grows In Great Drive For Oglethorpe

Growing interest in the special campaign now being conducted to raise $150,000 for Oglethorpe university was manifested at the meeting of committees and workers in the Wincoff hotel Thursday when several hundred volunteer workers reported and asked for assignments, and reports of unsolicited subscriptions were announced. If $150,000 is subscribed in Atlanta before January 1, friends of the university outside of the city have offered to match it with a building or buildings costing approximately an equal amount. This, with the sum of $350,000 in hand previous to the launching of the special three weeks' challenge drive, will give the university a total sum of $850,000 which it is stated by Dr. Thorndell Jacobs, president, will add the finishing touches to its reestablishment.

COMMITTEE WILL VOTE ON SALARY INCREASES TODAY

A schedule of $5 and $10 a month salary increases for firemen and policemen is to be adopted by the salary committee of city council in a special called meeting at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, members of the committee stated Thursday. The schedule, it is declared, provides the maximum raises which the city will have money to pay next year.

Councilman Allen Couch said that he would vote again for $20 a month raises for all members of both departments and Alderman J. L. Carpenter said he would ask $20 a month for all privates, leaving officers' salaries as they are at present. Councilman C. J. Vaughan, chairman; Alderman I. N. Ragsdale and Councilman J. L. Wells were quoted as favoring more conservative raises in order not to obligate the city for large sums than its revenues will warrant.

equal amount. This, with the sum of $350,000 in hand previous to the launching of the special three weeks' challenge drive, will give the university a total sum of $850,000 which it is stated by Dr. Thorndell Jacobs, president, will add the finishing touches to its reestablishment. "Due to the short time allotted by the challenge for the raising of the amount specified, the fact that the Christmas season is right on us and that Atlanta has just completed one of the greatest campaigns in its history," said J. R. Buchanan, general chairman of the campaign, Thursday, "the principal need at present is additional workers. The 'haves' is ripe and the reapers few."

Many are responding to the call of the general chairman for workers. It is said, and the new ones introduced Thursday by Mr. Buchanan were William Bursnell, T. J. Hollingsworth, an Oglethorpe alumnus of 1922; Dan Conklin and John K. Otley, Jr., members of the junior class. The announcement was made by Mr. Buchanan that the names of all subscribers would be made public at a later date.

Breaks His Leg.

Quiltman, Ga., December 13.—(Special.)—Dr. H. G. Holland, prominent dentist of Quiltman, while hunting stepped into a hole which was covered by leaves and fell, breaking his right leg just above the ankle. He was brought to his home and will be confined to his bed for several weeks.

U. S. KEEPS AN EYE ON BERGDOLL CASE

Washington, December 13.—The American government is watching developments in the Grover Cleveland Bergdoll case but it apparently has found no ground thus far for interceding.

State department officials decline to make any statement on the subject, but some light was thrown on their position today from other quarters after Representative Fitzgerald, republican, Ohio, had taken up with Secretary Hughes the possibility of intervention on behalf of Hoover Griffin, sentenced to jail in Germany for his part in the attempted kidnapping of Bergdoll.

Representative Fitzgerald first made public a letter stating that he had been informed by Secretary Hughes that the state department was awaiting an opportunity for representations to Germany for the release of Griffin.

An hour later he announced that Mr. Hughes, hearing of his announcement, had telephoned him and had "resented my giving out the impression that he had any intention of intervening or making any representations."

"I apologized for giving publicity to the matter," said Mr. Fitzgerald, "and told him I would say that any statement attributed to him by me of any such intention on his part was unwarranted."

Mr. Fitzgerald's letter, written to E. S. Griffin, Hamilton, Ohio, father of the man held, added in a postscript that "the secretary of state must be very careful and cautious in everything that he does and says with regard to matters of this kind."

"He tells me," the postscript continued, "that he is keeping in close touch with the situation and that a favorable moment is being watched for, for such representations or suggestions as could be made with propriety and tending to accomplish the result wished for without incurring the resentment of the foreign government involved. I am convinced by the way that the secretary talked to me that he is genuinely interested and sympathetic and determined to do everything in his power to help Hoover."

HOLD TWO SUSPECTS IN MOTOR COP DEATH

Tuscaloosa, Ala., December 13.—Two suspects giving their names as Jack Melet and Whitney Moran were placed in the county jail here today pending a full investigation into the killing of Starr Kenneth Thompson, 21, police motorcycle scout, last night.

Thompson is believed to have lost his life in an attempt to arrest two men in an automobile stolen a few hours before. He was shot three times with his own pistol and other marks including the print of teeth on his arms showed that he had engaged in a deadly struggle.

The two young men were arrested in Bessemer as they left the Tuscaloosa train. According to officials they are unable to give their home address or account for their actions. Thompson was the youngest man on the Tuscaloosa police force. He leaves a widow and child.

Coolidge Assures Cuban Diplomat On U. S. Attitude

Washington, December 13.—President Coolidge in accepting today the letters of credence of Dr. Cosme de la Torriente, Cuba's first diplomatic representative to the United States of ambassadorial rank, declared that although differences had arisen regarding the position of the United States and Cuba, he was sure that "as regards the fundamental aspects of this position our statements are in accord."

The new ambassador, who is president of the assembly of the League of Nations, was accompanied to the white house by Under Secretary Phillips of the state department and his staff and was received by Mr. Coolidge in the east room.

In a lengthy address treating on the relations between Cuba and the United States, the ambassador expressed the hope that the friendly attitude given from time to time by the American government would be continued and in reply to that hope Mr. Coolidge said:

"I take this opportunity to assure you that this government, as ever, entertains the highest solicitude for the welfare of Cuba. It will gladly continue to be of service by means of friendly counsel and advice which has invariably been given with a view to assisting the Cuban people to maintain an independent existence and to discharge their international obligations."

3 ATHENS WOMEN KEY ESTATE HEIRS

Athens, Ga., December 13.—(Special.)—Three Athens women heirs to the much-discussed estate of Martin Key in the heart of New York city, worth, it is claimed, around $200,000. The estate is said to have been leased over 100 years ago for 99 years and the lease has long since expired.

The Athens heirs to the estate, who claim they are direct descendants of Martin Key, are Miss Susan Bell, Mrs. D. H. Stokes and Mrs. Olive Wolfe, all of 1004 South Lumpkin street. Mrs. Lee B. David, of Comer, is a sister of the Athens women. Miss Susan Bell, who is connected with the State College of Agriculture, states she has heard about the estate all her life. She says it is located near Wall street, 77 acres in all. The estate is now in the hands of several different persons and, according to Miss Bell, the original lease cannot be found or at least has not yet been located.

A few weeks ago a Mrs. Mahone, of south Georgia, announced she was heir to the estate. It was reported she had been offered $10,000,000 for a settlement. Miss Bell and her sisters, she says, direct descendants of Martin Key, of Virginia. She has fragments of old wills signed by Martin Key on record in Albemarle county, Virginia. She has a copy of a will filed in Elbert county signed by Martin Bibb Key, who was a great-grandson of Martin Key, of England, who married a granddaughter of King Henry VII.

I. WEINBERG DIES OF HEART ATTACK IN JACKSONVILLE

I. Weinberg, 50 years of age, a pioneer resident of Atlanta, dropped dead in Jacksonville Thursday as the result of a sudden attack of heart trouble. He was at one time proprietor of the Bear Ice company. Of late years, Mr. Weinberg had been connected with business interests in Columbus and Jacksonville, his death coming while on a business trip. He also was connected with the Bernadine Medicine company, of Atlanta.

Mr. Weinberg was active in benevolent associations of Atlanta, holding membership in Georgia lodge No. 433, I. O. O. F., Royal Arcanum, the congregation of Ahavath Achim, and of the Hebrew Benevolent association.

His body will arrive in Atlanta Friday morning and will be taken in charge by Greenberg & Bond. He is survived by his widow; three daughters, Mrs. Gus Berman, Mrs. L. C. Rouglin, and Mrs. Meyer Schur; one son, Louis S. Weinberg, and a sister, Mrs. Zeida Berman. Funeral arrangements will be announced.

$4,000 SHEEP BARN BURNS AT COLLEGE

Athens, Ga., December 13.—(Special.)—The sheep barn at the State College of Agriculture, completed last summer and valued at about $4,000, was completely destroyed by fire early Thursday morning. The cause of the fire is not known. Twenty-three pedigreed sheep, worth several hundred dollars, were saved, the last one emerging from the barn being slightly burnt.

The fire department here was called to the fire and it was necessary to lay 1,100 feet of hose before the firemen could get water to the barn, thus making the fighting very difficult.

The state fire warden has recommended that the state install facilities for protecting the buildings on the college campus against fire, but the legislature has refused to pass the bill for the last ten years. The college is carrying about $500,000 insurance on the buildings without adequate fire protection.

MOVE UP TO BRITAIN IN CONSULATE CASE

Washington, December 13.—The question of re-establishing the American consulate at New Castle will be finally determined by the Washington government when it receives from the British foreign office a statement publicly exonerating Consul Brooks and Vice Consul Slater from charges made against them by British shipping interests and sustained by the foreign office, which led this government to order the consulate at New Castle to be permanently closed.

Despite the announcement by Ambassador Harvey that the New Castle situation had been amicable adjusted, no statement of exoneration for the American consular representatives has yet been received from London. It appears to the state department, therefore, that the next move in the case must come from London.

Once the British government has made a statement of exoneration, it was authoritatively said today, the incident would be closed in that the state department would be able to clear the records of the two consuls and hold them available for reappointment to consular posts in the British empire or elsewhere. Contingent on such a development, some consideration has been given to the appointment of consul Brooks to the Belfast consulate.

New Castle, Eng., December 13.—British merchants and shipping interests here are perplexed over the continued deadlock between Great Britain and the United States on the question of reopening the American consulate.

One of Ambassador Harvey's last acts before leaving England was to let it be known that the two governments had reached an amicable solution of the controversy. His statement, "the consulate will be reopened within a fortnight," was received with delight by British business men.

Fifteen months have elapsed since the consulate shut its doors and commercial delegations have made frequent trips to London to urge the foreign office and the American conlulate to hasten the reopening. It is understood that the next move rests with Washington.

The only remaining condition for the re-establishment of the consulate is believed to be the assignment of Consul Russell M. Brooks to a point within the British empire other than Belfast, where, it is understood, the United States desires him to go. Ostensibly Foreign Secretary Curzon takes the view that Belfast is too near Mr. Brooks' old post. The deadlock between the two governments is causing the loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars weekly to New Castle business houses.

BRYAN SEES TAXES AS CAMPAIGN ISSUE

Norfolk, Va., December 13.—Taxation will be the one dominating issue in the next presidential campaign, according to William Jennings Bryan in an interview upon his arrival in Norfolk tonight for a lecture engagement. He took issue with Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, indicating that the secretary is trying to sidestep the real principle in reduction of taxes to the general public.

He indicated that the reduction proposed by Mr. Mellon favors big interests and does not take care of the general public, and also declared that no program of the republican party provides for paying soldier bonus, which Mr. Bryan favors.

Mr. Bryan declared that it is his opinion that the democrats in congress should combine with the progressive faction of the republican party in putting over progressive legislation in this session which, he declares, is probably the most momentous session of congress from a political standpoint in many years.

Install Officers.

Dawson, Ga., December 13.—(Special.)—The morning service at the Dawson Methodist church will be given over next Sunday morning to an installation service for the officers of the church for the new conference year. These officers were elected at the last quarterly conference of the old conference year, which has just ended.

The past conference year was a very successful one for the local church and prospects are bright for 1924.

GERMANY WILL ASK FOR FINANCIAL HELP

Berlin, December 13.—(By the Associated Press.)—An appeal by the German government to foreign countries to help it out of its financial difficulties is expected in many quarters here within a short time. The appeal may take the form of a request to the league of nations to take control of Germany's finances.

Action for financial help is regarded as inevitable on the ground that without such assistance the government will not be able to pay its officials and will have to announce its bankruptcy. The forecast is that in a last desperate effort drastic taxation measures will be instituted.

In addition the taxes due in January for the Rhine-Ruhr relief are being collected now in advance.

It is not apparent what other resources the government will have to draw upon, as the Rentenbank is forbidden by statute to furnish further credits.

Apparently the government considers that no course is left to it but an appeal abroad for a large loan. The likeliest course this will take is believed to be a move toward having the league of nations take financial control.

DEMOCRAT OFFICIALS HAVE NO OPPOSITION

Demorest, Ga., December 13.—(Special.)—The election held here yesterday for city officers was an unusually quiet one, there being only one ticket in the field. The following were elected: Mayor, G. M. Sullivan; councilmen, O. E. Flor, E. H. Lamb, C. L. Percy and C. W. Stambaugh; treasurer, T. D. Williams; school board, Dr. G. S. Butler, Mrs. Amelia, F. Phillips and Mrs. C. L. Percy.

To Plant More Cane.

Spaulding, Ga., December 13.—(Special.)—Farmers in the lower part of Hancock county who raised a good crop of sugar cane this year for making syrup, plan to plant in even larger acreage next year. The price being received this fall for the product has boosted the contemplated acreage greatly.

Six States Agree With Pinchot On Coal Program

Harrisburg, Pa., December 13.—Representatives of six anthracite consuming states, including Pennsylvania, agreed here today to support a proposed federal anthracite coal control act outlined by Governor Pinchot and without binding themselves to accept it, consented to consider his proposal for a compact of states to regulate the hard coal business.

The meeting today was the second conference of representatives of anthracite using states called by the Pennsylvania governor to consider methods of regulating the industry and bringing about lower coal prices. At the first meeting, November 20, the governor suggested his plan for a state compact, but action was postponed to permit him to outline it in greater detail. Since then details of both the compact and a proposed federal act have been sent the thirty other states in which hard coal is consumed and these plans were before the meeting today.

Eleven states besides Pennsylvania were represented at the first meeting. Two governors, Preus of Minnesota, and Silzer, of New Jersey, were present. Today five states were represented—Minnesota, whose governor again was in attendance; Ohio, Michigan, New York and New Jersey, the last by F. M. Pearce, secretary to Governor Pinchot, who did not come.

Governor Pinchot's proposed federal coal control act met with little opposition today and after a discussion of its provisions the meeting authorized him to have the bill drafted along the lines outlined by him and sent to the governors of all anthracite using states with the request that they get behind it. Governor Pinchot also was authorized to see that the proposed act was introduced in congress.

His proposed state compact, which met with vigorous opposition from Governors Preus and Silzer at the first meeting, failed to receive the unanimous approval of the Minnesota and New Jersey representatives today. It was on a motion of Governor Preus, however, that Governor Pinchot was authorized to have the compact drawn up and sent to the other governors.

Built by Hudson under Hudson Patents

A 30 Minute Ride Will Win You

Essex closed car comforts now cost $170 less than ever before. Also with this lower price you get an even more attractive Coach body and a six cylinder motor built on the principle of the famous Hudson Super-Six.

It continues Essex qualities of economy and reliability, known to 135,000 owners. It adds a smoothness of performance which heretofore was exclusively Hudson's. Both cars are alike in all details that count for long satisfactory service at small operating cost.

You will like the new Essex in the nimble ease of its operation. Gears shift quietly. Steering is like guiding a bicycle, and care of the car calls for little more than keeping it lubricated. That, for the most part, is done with an oil can.

The chassis design lowers the center of gravity, giving greater comfort and safety, at all speeds, on all roads. You will be interested in seeing how this is accomplished.

Greater fuel economy is obtained. The car is lighter, longer and roomier. You will agree that from the standpoint of appearance, delightful performance, cost and reliability, the new Essex provides ideal transportation.

Baptist Convention Votes To Cut Number of Schools

Macon, Ga., December 13.—(Special.)—Adoption of a definite policy in regard to the secondary schools of the Mercer university system, election of members of the several boards of the convention, naming of Columbus as the next convention city and completion of routine business, marked the closing day of the 102nd annual session of the Georgia Baptist convention, at the First Baptist church today and tonight.

The matter of the report of the committee of ten appointed to make recommendations on the future policy toward secondary schools was taken up at noon and a heated debate was precipitated that continued until shortly after 2:30 o'clock, when an amendment offered by Rev. H. P. Bell, of Millen, was passed. The measure provides that the executive committee of the convention investigate conditions in the secondary schools with the view to retaining either four or five of them, and make recommendation to the next convention as to the disposition of the remaining schools.

Of the seven schools now in the system, two or three will be returned to the original trustees or sold outright. The vote of the convention was close, but after the passage of the Bell amendment, was made unanimous.

Dr. Arch C. Cree presided while state missions were being discussed. Rev. Norman W. Cox, of Savannah, read the convention committee's report on administration, and recommended that the executive committee provide the Georgia Baptists at the Southern Theological seminary, at Louisville, with an amount equal to that provided them for ministerial education by the seminary. The convention accepted the recommendation. The remainder of the time allotted to state missions was taken up by Mrs. W. J. Neel, president of the Women's Missionary union; Miss Julia Allen, young people's worker, and Miss Laura Lee Patrick.

The afternoon session, which convened at 3:30 o'clock, with W. W. Gaines presiding, began with the report of benevolences presented by Rev. W. H. Moody, of Canton.

Work in Atlanta.
W. P. Anderson, manager of the Baptist orphans' home at Hapeville, told of the work there. Dr. W. H. Major, of Atlanta, and others entered into the discussion of the Baptist hospital in Atlanta. Progress in the benevolent work through both institutions was shown by the report and the talks that followed.

Rev. John Jeter Hert, of Jackson, Tenn., delivered a short speech on relief and annuity, explaining in part the plan of the southern Baptist convention in caring for broken down ministers. Mr. Hert paid a tribute to the abilities of Dr. Arch C. Cree, Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, and Louis D. Newton, whom he called "three great executives."

Dr. D. J. Blocker, president of Shorter college, spoke on the work of that institution. The key note of his address was the necessity for Christian education. In naming Columbus as the convention city for 1924, Dr. C. W. Daniel, pastor of the First Baptist church, at Atlanta, was named as the convention preacher. Rev. G. J. Davis, pastor of the First Baptist church at Hartwell, was named alternate.

Boards Are Named.
Members of the boards and committees of the convention named by the nominations committee are given below:

Executive committee: Andrew J. Cobb, Athens; Josiah Crenshaw, Dalton; B. L. Curry, Pelham; J. M. Dodd, Winder; E. L. Grace, Augusta; W. I. Granade, Statesboro; J. W. Ham, Atlanta; J. M. The first business taken up by the convention today was the signing of a resolution, by Rev. H. M. Fugitt, of Macon, in charge. The report of the committee of foreign missions was presented by Rev. O. J. Gilbert, pastor of the First Baptist church at Brunswick.

REPORTS ON MISSIONS SHOW PROGRESS.

Macon, Ga., December 13.—Columbus, Ga., was selected as the next convention city for the Georgia Baptist convention at the closing session late today. The convention will open in Columbus on December 9, 1924.

Reports on Missions.

Dr. T. B. Ray, Richmond, Va., secretary of foreign missions, pleaded with the Georgia Baptists to continue the work in foreign fields.

The morning session was taken up with the reading of a report on foreign missions by O. J. Gilbert, chairman of the committee, and a report on home missions by Warren Mosby Seay, chairman of that committee, and discussions by a number of home and foreign missionaries.

Mr. Gilbert stressed the great need of funds, and homes could not be built on account of the failure of a number of persons to pay their pledges. The committee recommended that pastors preach sermons on missions at intervals.

Among those who spoke in the interest of missions were W. W. Adams, missionary to North China; Harvey Clark and Mrs. Clark; C. J. Low, missionary to the interior of China; Fred R. Pearson, missionary to Jerusalem; Dr. H. H. Hartenhaus, Jewish missionary, and J. W. O'Hara, mountain school worker, of Asheville, North Carolina.

Asks Larger Fund.

Dr. Ray said that the greatest need in the field of missions was for men and women. He made a plea for a greatly increased mission fund and stated that the greatest handicap to the missionary has to be that of seeing countless opportunities and being unable to take them. He concluded his talk with an account of some of his experiences in the mission field.

Mr. Adams, who has been a missionary to China for 15 years, confined his talk to the Shantung province mission. "The mission is composed of 90 churches, having 115,000 members and 82 missionaries," he said.

Mr. Clark said that the barriers to religion had been broken down in Japan and gave an appreciation of the work that has been done there. He said that the greatest need was to have unlimited time in which to speak she would express her feelings regarding Japan in a little song.

Mohammedan Problem.

Before beginning his talk Mr. Love presented the president of the convention with a back scratcher which he had brought from China. "When a man says that Christianity can not change the art of the Chinese he does not know what he is talking about," he said. "I have visited town after town where the gospel had not been preached and I consider it the greatest privilege of the Christian to preach where the gospel has never been heard."

Mr. Pearson said that the Jews in Palestine were becoming more open-minded and that they could be approached as never before. The largest element in Palestine, he said, were the Mohammedans, numbering 530,000, who were the hardest of all to reach.

Dr. Seay in his report on home missions said that there was abundant reason for Thanksgiving. "Although a number of mountain schools have been abandoned the same high standard of efficiency is being maintained," he said. The report was adopted. Mr. Seay then made an address in which he stressed the need of sacrifice.

Mr. Hartenhaus, who was converted from the Jewish to the Christian religion, emphasized the importance of personal missionary work among the Jews. "There are 70,000 Jews in the Christian Science churches of New York," he said. "Why, then, can't we have as many converted to our religion?"

Mr. O'Hara pointed out the needs of the 30 mountain schools in eight different states.

COMB LAND, SEA AND AIR IN HUNT FOR LEO KORETZ

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Chicago, December 13.—All means of communication, including radio, were employed by state and federal authorities today in following two clues which they hope will enable them to locate Leo Koretz, who is missing after an alleged swindle said to be the most amazing ever accomplished in the middle west.

According to investigators, Koretz, known as a lawyer, financier and philanthropist, defrauded investors in a Central American oil venture of funds which it was said may reach $5,000,000. Already losses estimated at $2,000,000 have been reported, the authorities said.

The two clues advanced today were that Koretz either is in the Atlantic in a speedy motorboat, or that he is on his way to Honduras in an airplane.

The last appearance of Koretz known to the authorities was in New York December 5, when he checked out of a prominent hotel.

Sucker List Grows.
Throughout the day, the list of names of investors whom Koretz is alleged to have defrauded grew, and the state's attorney, who has a score of creditors were prepared to go before the grand jury tomorrow and other stockholders were prepared to institute bankruptcy proceedings.

Chief Justice John Caverly of the criminal court today issued an order compelling six safety deposit boxes, to which they learned Koretz had keys. Federal indictments also may be sought for alleged misuse of the mails.

Announcement Made by State's Attorney.
Cave late today that relatives of Koretz had volunteered to turn over $300,000 which had been given them by the financier.

Announcement also made that Miss Hara, a wealthy woman, who would turn over $75,000 which Koretz gave her a short time ago as stock dividends.

Paid Prompt Dividends.
Mrs. Koretz and her two children are living in a luxurious home, but have little money, according to Mrs. Koretz. Mr. Koretz's mother, who was reported to have invested her entire fortune in her son's enterprise, is reported to be in a serious condition as a result of a nervous breakdown.

According to Dr. M. E. Eisenstadt, who said he had maintained a lifelong acquaintance with the missing financier, Koretz paid dividends of stocks promptly each month for ten years, making his customers' investments seem so profitable that they reinvested the dividends.

Some doubt was cast today on the belief that Koretz had left the United States by way of New York. Some of those who conferred with the state's attorney's assistants said there were rumors that a yacht had been waiting for him at Vancouver, and that he had left by way of the Canadian border.

Assistant State's Attorney Klarkowski said today that he had found one communication among Koretz papers which indicated friendship with a woman. He is investigating the letter.

AGRICULTURE MEET DELAYED ONE DAY

New Orleans, December 13.—On account of the late arrival of many of the delegates to the conference here of agriculture officials, including commissioners and directors of warehouse and marketing, no formal session was held today. It was expected the meeting would get underway tomorrow. It is planned by those sponsoring the conference to standardize classes and grades of agriculture products as well as their marketing and warehousing through uniformity of agricultural laws and a general understanding among producers.

ALLEGED CONFESSION WRUNG FROM NEGRO

Sheffield, Ala., December 13.—Government officers at nitrate plant No. 1 said today that Sam Greenhill, negro, once grilling, was confessed that he killed Harry S. White, mounted guard last Saturday morning. White's pistol has been found in Greenhill's home, it is said. Dave Dewberry, another negro, arrested in connection with the killing, admitted to officials that he helped dispose of the officer's body in an abandoned cistern where it was afterwards found.

Burglars Loot Home of Gordon, Mayor Pro Tem

Burglars plundered the home of Robert A. Gordon, mayor pro tem, 405 North Jackson street, early Thursday night and escaped with jewelry and clothing valued at $1,000.

Members of the Gordon family who returned home shortly after dark are believed by police to have frightened the burglars before they had completed their contemplated thievery, valuable left on the scene where other were seized and deep tracks in the ground beside a window, indicating a swift get-away, convinced Plainclothesmen Woolly and Harrison, who investigated the burglary, that the thieves had been routed by the appearance at the front door of members of the family.

Circumstances surrounding the crime indicated that the house was being watched by the looters for several hours previous to the burglary. There was a period of only 40 minutes when no one was at home, Mr. Gordon stated. The last member of the family to leave the house is said to have seen a strange man lurking in the vicinity about dark.

JOHN M. MOREHEAD DIES IN CHARLOTTE

John M. Morehead, of Charlotte, N. C., prominent business man and a member of the republican national committee from North Carolina, died Thursday at his home, according to news received by relatives here. He was prominent in political circles of his state, having once represented his district in congress.

He is survived by his wife, who was formerly Miss Mamie Garrett, whose father, Thomas W. Garrett, Sr., was a resident of Atlanta for many years; two brothers-in-law, Thomas W. Garrett and Lacy Garrett, of Atlanta; two sons, Garrett Morehead and John L. Morehead, and one daughter, Miss Katherine Morehead.

Coffee The Whole Family Appreciates

Aroma, Flavor, and Strength are the basis of satisfaction in drinking coffee. If the coffee served in the cup on the table is to have these qualities, they must first be found in the package of coffee in the kitchen. You can not get out of the coffee in the package what isn't there. Coffee that has lost its aroma and strength in the package is bound to be "flat" in taste when it reaches the cup.

For that reason, we pack Morning Joy Coffee in a vacuum can which seals in all of its original aroma, flavor and strength and preserves it until it reaches your coffee pot and your table. You can always depend on Morning Joy Coffee being fresh. Ask your grocer to send you a can. The whole family will like it.

JUST AND RIGHT—A God of truth and without iniquity just and right is he.—Deuteronomy 32:4.

ONE WAY OUT!

Washington dispatches of Thursday release a letter addressed by Governor Clifford Walker and Commissioner of Agriculture Brown to President Coolidge, suggesting a readjustment of farm conditions in this country by inviting the distressed wheat farmers of the middle west to Georgia to occupy cultivable farms now awaiting successful operation by men of will and resources.

This communication to the president, who is a New England farmer "born and raised," and who showed deep concern for the farming classes generally, and for the wheat farmers in particular, in his recent message to congress, opens up an opportunity for a redistribution of white farmers of the country, following the 1922-23 exodus of thousands of negro tenant farmers from the state, that may revolutionize, farm economics in all the agricultural states east of the Ohio and Missouri rivers.

Georgia has witnessed the abandonment of thousands of good tillable acres by cotton growers who know and care for nothing else except the growing of cotton.

Even where they have remained the production of cotton under boll weevil conditions has necessitated rigid restrictions in the amount of acreage that can be planted.

On the other hand it is known that farmers in the wheat belt, as a rule, are anxious and willing to diversify, but conditions in those sections do not admit of commercial diversification.

The necessary abandonment of cotton acres leaves unused large areas in Georgia admirably adapted to diversified farming operations combined with dairying, hog and poultry raising.

It is obvious, therefore, that if any appreciable number of these wheat-belt farmers can be led to take advantage of Georgia's invitation it will be wonderfully advantageous both to them and to Georgia; and will be a most excellent thing in a national sense.

In this connection it is interesting to note the movements that are being made by other states in the cotton belt for the occupation of idle farm lands by good white farmers from other states, and for making land owners out of present farm tenants.

In South Carolina, as is fully brought out in a discussion on this page, some of the foremost men of the state recently organized a land settlement association, and sent a commission into twenty states of the far west and on the Pacific coast to study land settlement systems.

As a result the commission returned not only impressed with the far out-reaching advantages of the south, but determined, through a system of good land selections, proper credits and efficient guidance and service, to bring hundreds of new families from that same country into Carolina during the coming year.

There is also discussed on this page and in the same connection, the summary of a remarkable letter mailed to debtor-farmers in Georgia recently by J. T. Holloman, president of the Southern Mortgage company, in which the writer, who is Georgia born and a close student for a quarter of a century of farm conditions and values and general rural economics, takes the view that farm land values in this state, now at a low ebb, are compelled to advance, and that rapidly and firmly.

His letter is an inspiration to farmers to have faith in Georgia, faith in a program of balanced agriculture and faith in the certain advancement in the value of their land holdings.

The fact is, Georgia is getting better in agricultural conditions every year. The boll weevil has forced the break-away from single crop slavery, and the acres necessarily surrendered to other crops have not only taught the lesson of growing food and feed, but have brought to the front other merchantable crops that have proven far more valuable, through the coordinated establishment of new markets, than cotton in the old pre-weevil days.

This year the farmers of north Georgia are more prosperous than at any time since the deflation of three years ago, and in middle and south Georgia, where the cotton season was bad, the program of balanced agriculture saved the situation. Fruits, pecans, peanuts, hay, live stock—all of these commodities have poured hundreds of thousands of dollars into the various sections irrespective of cotton.

And the truth is that the cotton farmer rigidly adhered to the rules of reason laid down for growing cotton under weevil conditions, that is, six or eight acres to the plow, intensive and continuous cultivation and poison, he made cotton and more actual profit from the cotton acre than in the days before the weevil crossed the Mississippi.

One drawback in Georgia, and it is one that ought to be remedied, is the attitude of too many of the large land holders in blocking the progress of diversification, and of small-acreage and intensive farming. It is a selfish attitude, and one that deserves the censure of every progressive citizen.

On the whole, there is much to encourage the Georgia farmer, and much to encourage the hope that large areas of the abandoned acreage in the state may at no distant day be taken up by progressive white farmers of the west whom Georgia will welcome as citizens and as factors in the further material development of one of the great states of the union, and the Empire State of the South.

THANKS TO THE MAYOR.

The salary increase of a large number of city officials has been agreed upon due to the good work of the mayor, who from the very first held out against the proposed increase of $20.00 per month on the ground that he knew if this increase were granted it would be impossible for the city to pay it.

In the beginning the mayor took the position that he would stand for an increase of $10.00 per month and that this would be far preferable to the beneficiaries to an increase which the city would not be able to meet and which it could not pay if granted.

Notwithstanding the mayor's warning the salary committee by a bare majority arbitrarily and unwarrantedly reported an increase which the mayor had shown the city could not possibly meet.

After reflection, however, those who advocated this arbitrary increase were convinced that they were standing in the way of any increase at all and they finally came to the mayor's position.

So due to the good work of the mayor this increase will go into effect with the beginning of the year and the city will be able to meet it.

This is simply another illustration of the fact that Atlanta has its chief executive a man with a level head, and one who believes that a city, like any other big corporation, must be conducted along business lines.

After all, every dollar paid for salaries, and for everything else that represents municipal expenditure, comes out of the pocket of the people.

A city derives its revenue from what it gets from the people and every dollar it spends comes from their pockets. Unfortunately, many public servants who ought to have more sense fall to take this fact into consideration, operating upon the theory that municipal income can, in some way or other, be extracted from the air like nitrogen.

Fortunately, Atlanta's mayor is not one of this kind. He knows that the people pay the city bills and he is standing courageously against emergent tax levies in the shape of increased water rates or otherwise, that will add to the already over-burdened tax payers who are carrying.

Certainly it has been a year of prosperity—when you consider the Christmas bundles that is carrying home.

Now for the safe and sane holiday automobile!

Pretty soon the revolutionary Mexican generals will be printing money with their pictures on it.

Says the Houston Post: "In saying the persimmon beer we advocate comes within the sanction of the Volstead act, former Secretary Daniels awards high praise to the totality of our abstinence, but he overlooks much of the potentiality of persimmon beer."

The weather man will have to "come across," with all the Christmas children praying for the Snow Man.

In the opinion of a Billville exchange it's easy to mistake the braying of a restless mule for a call to run for office.

Just In Passing

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON

As the new year approaches Georgia is awakening to the necessity of making a most careful survey of her own situation, and planning for the future.

This is primarily an agricultural state. It is in natural advantages, including a climate that permits all-the-year operations, and thus successful balancing of crops; and in soil adapted to any of the old staple commodities, and to fruits, berries, pecans, peanuts, melons, vegetables, etc.; and in cheapness of lands; facilities for transporting; competitive water and rail freight rates and scores of other inducements, one of the outstanding states in the union in offering opportunities of marked economic value for making a successful business out of farming.

And yet, it is a notable fact, and known of all Georgians, that hundreds of thousands of good tillable acres are abandoned, while other hundreds of thousands of acres of cut-over lands are idle, waiting for development.

These conditions can be remedied, and they must be.

The Georgia farmer today—if he is a farmer—is on the high road to prosperity. He is beginning to learn that if he grows cotton successfully he must radically restrict his acreage, cultivate intensively, fertilize liberally, work hard, stay by his job, and poison weeds, insect infestation develops and makes a business of growing cotton for a profit and not to pay a mortgage for supplies.

That means in turn that he must grow his food and feed, utilize profitably his wastes, utilize some of the released acreage for pastures, grow and sell meat and other farm products, and organize.

They are learning that lesson. Thousands of them have already learned it, and thousands of Georgia farmers today are actually out of debt and have money in the banks. They are living happily and comfortably, too, and educating their children.

Others will learn. Necessity is a stern, sometimes merciless, master, but what it teaches is not soon forgotten.

The Georgia association has been doing a good work as an unofficial, non-profit-making organization for facilitating and encouraging a readjustment of farm conditions to the new system of rural economics forced by the weevil.

In a letter recently addressed by Governor Walker to President Coolidge, and released Thursday in Washington, an invitation was extended to the distressed wheat farmers of the mid-west belt to come to Georgia.

And why not? We have the lands; we have everything to encourage profit-making farming by men who will, and we want an influx of good white farmers.

Thousands of negro tenants have left Georgia. They are in the industrial centers of the east and central west.

If we can bring thousands of good white farmers and citizens into Georgia from the central west wouldn't the readjustment of populations be a great national blessing?

Wouldn't the distribution of farmers, as proposed, be to the advantage of everybody?

Certainly! Bankers and business men of Atlanta recently cured the financial ills of the Georgia association and gave it a new grip on the great service it is doing in balancing agriculture, and in bringing in home-seekers.

The governor refers to this institution as a state facility for helping the prospective home-seeker. I am glad he did, and I believe frankly a new dawn is breaking for Georgia agriculture.

Other southern states are alive. South Carolina sent a commission to the far west to study the various systems of land settlement. The commission is back, and what did it report? Read just a paragraph—

"We understand better than we ever did before what a mistake thousands of farmers of the western states are continually making when they move to the treeless plains of the northwest 'where they must pay 600 miles of freight on a chip that they want to throw at a bird, and then must pay for the bird when they have killed it. They throw the chip! Everything that goes to make civilization must be carried until the soil can be made to pay tribute, while in South Carolina all of these things are at our doors. The great difficulty, however, is to make the outside world believe it, and this, they say, 'can never be done except through organized effort on the part of the state with the enactment of the necessary legislation.'"

What South Carolina has Georgia has.

Shall Georgia remain idle? Now listen further—

After reviewing its investigations through the west and on the Pacific coast, and giving in detail some of the results of colonization enterprises carried out in several western states and in California, the commission made a careful personal study of the land settlement operations in New Hanover county, North Carolina, which have been carried on for some years under the auspices of Hugh McElree, of Wilmington. The commission reported that it is unanimously of the opinion that land settlement can be properly carried on either by the state or by private corporations, or by persons when closely supervised by the state. It must be based upon good land, proper credit and efficient guidance and service. It found that many counties are now engaged in land settlement and are offering advantageous terms to settlers.

The commission recommends to the assembly the enactment of a mortgage association act for the purpose of encouraging and aiding individuals and corporations to assist in developing the state's agricultural resources. The commission is convinced that there is nothing that the state can do that will so advertise the resources of the state, and call to the attention of

is providing progressive legislation to give a generous welcome to the right kind of home-seekers, as the enactment into laws of the above recommendations. Such action would herald far and wide that South Carolina is taking its place along with the other great states in the march of progress.

I haven't the time to discuss the legislative features proposed in South Carolina. We have legislative troubles of our own in Georgia, but I merely want to concentrate attention on the fact that other states in the cotton belt are reconstructing their agricultural economies, and Georgia must do the same thing.

You go into a city and see it full of vacant houses and you get out—back out if necessary.

Georgia must get her abandoned farms occupied, and she will.

Nothing is more certain, except death and taxes, than that Georgia farm land values are going to rapidly advance, and that this is to become soon one of the greatest agricultural states in the union.

Absolutely! This brings me to a copy of a letter just sent out by J. T. Holloman—I don't think "J. T." is any kin to me, as none of my kin folks ever had enough money to loan—

Anyway Mr. Holloman is president of the Southern Mortgage company and is one of the closest students of farm land values in the state and one of the most progressive as well as optimistic men of affairs in the state. He believes in the farmer and the farmers' opportunities.

His letter was addressed to farmers who are obligated, who have mortgages on their holdings, and it breathes so much hope and inspiration that I take the liberty without his consent to publish some paragraphs from the same. For instance read this—

"Just as certainly as values rose after the days of the civil war, just as certainly as they increased after the panics of 1893 and 1907, just as surely as they advanced after the war broke out in Europe, so they will rise again to the level they reached in 1919 and 1920. If the experience of a lifetime is worth anything, an experience confined entirely to the negotiations of loans on farm lands, my experience and my judgment ought to be of service to you at this time. And I want to say to you with all the earnestness I can command, that if you permit your farm to pass from you at this time, simply because you feel unable to raise the comparatively small amount necessary to pay interest and taxes, you will never come to regret it. In a short time you will see this very farm reach the point where it will sell for just as much money as it would have brought you in 1918, 1919 or 1920. And I say this with full appreciation of the fact that the boll weevil is here to stay. That makes no difference whatever. The 3,000,000 people in the state of Georgia are not going to surrender the fight and give up in despair. If you read the newspapers of Georgia, you will see that Florida on the south is enjoying unprecedented prosperity. You know that the states of Texas, Mississippi, Louisiana and Alabama on the west have practically recovered from the boll weevil and are prosperous. I can tell you that all the farm loans we have in this state have had no difficulty with interest and taxes. The whole country knows that the state of Georgia is in economic good luck, and is prosperous as to the attention of people everywhere. There is no talk of hard times in North Carolina. Still more remarkable is the fact that South Carolina, on the east, which sank as low as Georgia did last year on account of the boll weevil and deflation, has already recovered and is now in Georgia in cotton production. The newspapers tell us of the wonderful crops that are being raised in South Carolina and I know of my own knowledge that the people of that state have rapidly recovered from falling prices and are now enjoying a prosperity that is well beyond anything that Georgia has known in years. Let me convince you that the Georgia farmer will remain in his present position, and that he will not be driven back into the problem of raising his lands with a reward and rack it within a very short time."

That is the kind of talk I love to hear from a man who is as honest as I am talking about, as J. T. Holloman does. Read on—

"In my heart I believe that the chief difficulty with the farmers of this state at this time arises from the fact that they have lost faith in the value of Georgia farm lands. They have already sold a portion of their land values since the civil war. They ought to know, but apparently they have forgotten, that during all the years from 1900 up to 1920 land values increased steadily. They ought to know that conditions which are usually temporary and which are not permanent, are not permanent. They ought to realize from what is happening in nearly every county in Georgia, that the people of every county who are coming to the conclusion that we have reached the lowest point in the present period of depression, and these men are already on the lookout for bargains in farm lands. Just because you are discouraged and find yourself tempted to sell your land at a low price, and your taxes, need not make you think that no one else attaches any value to your land. Just as certain as the sun will rise tomorrow, your county who already have their eyes on you and who are preparing to buy your farm, just as soon as you surrender and quit the fight, there ever was a time when you needed more money than you have now."

This is straight talk, and ought to be read by every farmer in Georgia. This state today gives every promise of an agricultural comeback that will revolutionize every line of business.

There is already a general prosperity in the state. The crop values of this year reach nearly a half billion. There are spots where the distress is acute. By balancing the farm operations, however, most farmers have at least grown their own supplies. Many have made satisfactory profits.

The tide is at its lowest ebb, and the hour for the flood is at hand. Be of good cheer!

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

Who'd Have Thought It Possible?
A French and a German football match was played the other day at Mayence in the presence of 50,000 spectators. We are glad to say you in sport and forget politics," said the German team captain as he warmly shook the hand of his French opponent.

1924 Olympic games. It would have done more to bring the countries together than all the conferences in the world, for sport makes brotherhood of all. The French won the game, 5-0. At the conclusion of the game the two teams cheered each other and the crowds cheered the winners. The official referee said that there had been remarkably little rough work. On Christmas day the German players will play the British in Cologne, and the winners will play the French in the afternoon.

Force of Habit.
There is nothing unusual in the disappearance of an automobile these days. Quite often a dozen machines are taken in one single night by joy riders and abandoned later in some lonely spot. But a rather unusual case came up in recorder's court in New York the other day. A car had disappeared there that Frank Nilsson owned on a spree, entered a street car, took one of the trolley cars and went for a ride, quite unaware that a half by two policemen in a commandeered automobile. They halted him on a bridge with a fine of $100. A few minutes before a car was due from the other direction. Frank had been a motorman ten years ago.

The League Did It.
Nothing has been so miraculous since the war as the recovery of Austria. Although the League of Nations expected a deficit in the new budget, the financial affairs of that country show a small surplus. Vienna has again become a banking center. Dr. Zimmermann, league commissioner and former mayor of Rotterdam, is the man who has been responsible for this economic marvel, assisted by Bishop Seipel, the priest-chancellor of Austria. Berlin is watching improvements in Austria with the greatest interest. There is a lesson to learn there for them.

Italy Again Rebuffed by France.
France has barred Italy from representation in the Tangiers conference. Originally the Italians had little interest in the settlement of the question of the status of Tangiers. That was to be a matter to be settled between England and France alone. But since Mussolini took charge of things and the Italian foreign policy has undergone rapid changes, Italy wants a new place in the sun. She is the great Mediterranean power and will have a voice in all questions affecting countries bordering on the old world sea. It is not a happy move to the Tangiers conference, for the second time in one month. Mussolini will remember it on the day when he will make new demands on France. France will have to give in or fight then.

Return to Pagan Ritual Urged.
A measure of paganism in religion is needed to heal the breach between the sacred and the secular, declares Dr. Y. N. Guthrie, rector of St. Mark's in the Boverie, of New York. On Sunday he devoted his service to a Chinese ritual in view of the fact that the birthday of Confucius. The only parts of the service relating to prayer and the doctrine. In his sermon, in which he said that every single act of the ancients was suffused with religion, Dr. Guthrie said: "Look at our aspects toward sex. We drive it in instead of out. The modern American attitude toward sex is eagerly in view of the fact that the pagan gods, medicine, law, industry, food, breathing and the arts with religious ritual." All we have, he added, "is sticky doctrines. We sadly need religion."

Not So Crazy As It Looks.
An old recipe against tuberculosis has been found by Dr. Walker L. Stegman, of New York. The recipe is over 100 years old. "Boil a pound of tender beef, cut in small pieces; a quarter of a pound of wild rice; six ounces of raisins; and four pounds of brown sugar in three parts of rain water. Let the person drink a tablespoonful three times a day when the stomach is empty." We may smile when we read about the rusty nails, but chemists know that when beef and rusty nails or oxidized iron are boiled in water, a reaction occurs with the formation of soluble iron which is absorbed by the stomach and is eventually to all parts of the body through the circulation.

Strengthen U. S. Army "What For?"—Briand.
President Coolidge says "army and navy must be strengthened." This despite the fact that this immense country, rich in men and material, is the best protected in the world against the risks of war. Immense oceans separate it from Europe and Asia. Mexico is not very dangerous and Canada has a pretty good reputation. The risks of war, however, are necessary, we wonder what sort of precautions he would feel were necessary if he had a nation like Germany for a neighbor—a country with whom he had signed a treaty, and who had signed a letter, in addition had signed a letter of guarantee with other nations and saw that part denounced. How would he feel under those circumstances? Yet that is the way France feels, so speaks Briand, former foreign minister of France.

New Way to Hunt Wolves.
The province of Ontario has raised the bounty on wolves. Now comes Stanley Carlson, of St. Paul, Minn., who is going to Port Arthur and the English river district to slay the wolves. He has turned himself into a human porcupine, by constructing an anti-wolf equipment consisting of a cowhide suit covered with spikes and ironed gloves. The outfit weighs over 23 pounds despite the fact it has been embedded in it 1,200 nails at half inch intervals. Carlson's plan is to let the wolves nibble at his armor while he clings to the end with an ax. There's genius for you.

What is the pay of an admiral in the United States navy?
$8,000 base pay, $2,200 personal cash allowance, $800 for rent (without dependents). If an admiral has dependents, his rental allowance is $1,200, and subsistence $1,000 a month. The base pay of a naval officer is the same whether he is on land or at sea duty, but the allowances differ.

When was the first magazine published in the United States?
A publication called The American Magazine, which was issued in colonial times by Andrew Bradford, a printer and a business rival of Franklin. It was edited by John Webb. The first number appeared in Philadelphia, February 13, 1741. Franklin's was excluded from the Magazine, appeared three days later. Both publications were short lived. The American Magazine lasted only two numbers and Franklin's for six.

What is the law about soldiers, deserters, and ex-convicts voting?
The United States constitution provides that soldiers, sailors and marines discharged from service of the United States cannot vote, while in Vermont, deserters from United States service during the war are excluded from voting. In Indiana, Ohio, Nebraska, North Dakota, Oregon, Texas and West Virginia, United States soldiers and sailors cannot exercise the right of suffrage. In almost all of the states, ex-convicts cannot vote.

WINTER AT HAND, SAYS FORECASTER

Icy breath of the snow-capped Rockies was moving wraithlike Thursday over the fields of the great west, over the pine-carpeted Mississippi valley, steadily toward Atlanta.

Water pipes through which unbroken streams have gurgled for nearly ten months were giving preliminary shudders at onsets of the freezing breath of the snow-capped mountains. Automobile radiators were facing their first draining of the year.

round operations in standard cropping, or in live stock and dairy farming.

It was pointed out to the president that Georgia has not only a waiting opportunity for more white farmers but facilities, through the what-farmers-in-Georgia association, for seeing that they are properly located under advantageous circumstances.

The letters of Governor Walker, as received at the white house, follows: The Honorable Calvin Coolidge, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Coolidge: I have noted with appreciation the interest manifested by you in seeking means for the betterment of agricultural conditions in the United States in general and for the relief of the what-farmers-in-Georgia association in particular.

A profound and permanent economic relief may be found through the voluntary removal of the large number of farmers in those distressed localities to the south is the reason for this communication.

Through the ravages of the boll weevil and the consequent migration of numbers of our tenant farmers many thousands of acres of good farm land in Georgia are now farmed by a large proportion of this land which, by sound farming methods, can be made to produce most satisfactory returns, as a considerable number of northern farmers who have located here within the last several years can testify. It offers wonderful natural advantages for the future of the state.

It is a matter of grave national concern that farmers in some sections of the country, through no fault of their own, are unable to secure a decent living from their efforts, while in other more naturally favored sections, high freight rates and economic conditions make it impossible for them to seem to render advisable, perhaps unavoidable, a redistribution of the considerable number of farmers in those distressed localities to the south is the reason for this communication.

It is in that connection I am writing to you. We have in Georgia not only a waiting opportunity for more white farmers but also facilities for seeing that they are properly located under advantageous circumstances. That is a part of the program of the what-farmers-in-Georgia association, a non-profit state-wide development organization, which is devoting its efforts to the improvement of agricultural conditions in the state. It not only helps to locate but to protect the prospective settler.

I should be glad if public attention could be called to the facts and the invitation of Georgia extended to the distressed farmers of the wheat-growing states who might welcome an opportunity to situate themselves better. I can promise to them interest in the cooperation of the Georgia department of agriculture, the State College of Agriculture, and the Georgia association, a guarantee that they will be fairly advised and given prompt assistance in their locations under conditions that will insure for them an opportunity for substantial success.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, CLIFFORD WALKER, Governor.

J. J. BROWN, Commissioner of Agriculture and ex-officio commissioner of immigration. December 10, 1922.

New Orleans, December 13.—Federal district Judge Rufus Foster late today signed an order for the removal of Diego Nolen from New Orleans to Memphis, Nolen, a federal prisoner taken to Memphis from Atlanta to testify in a narcotic case, escaped last week and was re-arrested here several days ago.

Coolidge Drops Alabama Proxy To Run Himself

Washington, December 13.—Friends of President Coolidge today abandoned the plans they had made to obtain the Alabama delegation to the republican national convention by having W. Aubrey Thomas, of Birmingham, run as a candidate for the presidential nomination in the republican primary in Alabama. Instead it is likely that Mr. Coolidge's name will be entered in the primary of that state.

The plans to have Mr. Thomas run were made to meet the provision recently placed in the Alabama primary law which would give a preference regardless of the state vote to any Alabama candidate. The national committee in its call for the Cleveland convention provided for non-recognition of any state law which "chinders, abridges or denies" the right of all candidates to a free and open primary.

With this situation before them the friends of Mr. Coolidge said the plans originally made had been abandoned and indicated that the president would enter the primary to contest for the delegation with any other candidates. The political situation in Oklahoma, which generally is acknowledged as complex, also was discussed today by those active in the Coolidge campaign. Senator Harrell had a lengthy conference with the Coolidge campaign. Whether any conclusions were reached was not disclosed.

GUIMARES CONVICTED OF SWINDLING SCHEME

New York, December 13.—Albert E. Guimares, who figured in the Dorothy King murder case, and three assistants in various stock selling enterprises, were convicted today by a federal jury of using the mails to defraud.

Reports that attempts had been made to bribe one or more jurors were made to Judge Mack after the verdict and he hesitated in admitting the man to bail. Federal agents told him, however, that they were investigating the robbery reports and the men were admitted to $10,000 bail each. They will be sentenced Monday.

The three convicted with Guimares were William E. Kaas, Henry Fields and Frank Sheldon. Guimares was recommended for Kaas and upon the plea of his attorney Judge Mack reduced his bail to $5,000.

Guimares operated his scheme from various addresses in the theatrical district and was said to have taken thousands of dollars from investors. Judge Mack referred to as "suckers."

ARGENTINE INDIANS STAY ON WARPATH

Buenos Aires, December 13.—Indian raids and depredations in the northern Argentine provinces are continuing.

Members of patriotic organizations have investigated a report that big land owners in several provinces have taken vast stretches of land from the Indians, reducing them to poverty.

The organizations now recommend that the lands be bought by the government and returned to the Indians.

G. O. P. CONVENTION TO FACE TURMOIL AT VERY OUTSET

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, December 13.—Restoration of the delegate strength of southern states by the recent action of the republican national committee drew fire today from Senator Hiram Johnson, himself a candidate for the presidential nomination. At the same time the restoration was defended, in a statement by Chairman John T. Adams of the republican national committee.

The situation thus brought about promises a fight in the Cleveland convention and is the principal one growing out of the recent meeting of the national committee here.

Senator Johnson characterized the committee's action as beyond its powers and "repugnant to every sense of fair dealing and just representation."

Chairman Adams, on the other hand, defended it as an act of "justice to congressional districts in the south where the democratic party refuses a free ballot and an honest count to republicans both black and white."

"For the republican party to abandon that principle would be equivalent to its denying republicans of those southern districts any voice whatever in party conventions before the democrats had first denied them the right of citizenship at home."

This would work a double injustice to republicans of such districts and would lead encouragement to further disfranchisement of southern republicans by the dominant democratic machines of the solid south.

Party Stronger in Dixie.

The 1924 apportionment, however, raises from 7,500 to 10,000 the minimum republican vote necessary to give congressional districts an additional delegate. This rule gives extra representation in the party convention to those districts which furnish a free ballot and an honest count to republicans both black and white.

In spite of this increase of 2,500 in the basic vote necessary to give any district two delegates, the "solid south" gains nine district delegates over 1920. This proves a healthy increase of republican party strength in the south which would be rewarded.

Another very important change in the 1924 apportionment is the granting of three additional delegates at large to every state which cast its electoral vote for the republican party candidate. While this does not decrease the actual southern representation in the next republican national convention, it does decrease its relative strength.

"The best way to visualize this fact is to compare the net result of the 1924 apportionment with that of 1920. There were 984 delegates in the 1920 convention. There will be 1,109 in the 1924 convention—an increase of 125. Of this increase the states carried by the republican presidential candidate in 1920 will get 116, while the democratic states of the solid south will get only nine."

Dublin Wealth Grows.

Dublin, Ga., December 13.—(Special.)—Bank clearings for Dublin for the month of November have been made public and reveal an increase of $673,163.91 over the same month of last year. The statement issued is: November, 1922, $4,444,931.21; November, 1921, $3,771,767.30.

Job-Holder Are Party.

"In these states there is no real political party. There is nothing republican in them except a few office-holders absolutely under the direction and control of the administration."

"So Dakota polled 110,000 votes for Harding and is given 13 delegates. Michigan polled 762,000 Harding votes, 50 times as many as South Carolina and Mississippi and is given only 33 delegates. Nebraska polled 350,000 Harding votes, nearly 18 times as many as these two southern states, and has 10 delegates. Indiana with 606,000 Harding votes, 45 times as many as many as these two southern states, has 25 delegates. California, polling 625,000 Harding votes, 44 times as many, is given 23 delegates. New Jersey, with 611,000 republican votes, is given 31 delegates."

G. O. P. Will Flout.

"And so it runs throughout the list of republican states. The republican states are penalized. The southern states, where there is no real republican party and where delegations sometimes are a farce and a scandal, are rewarded. The resolution of the national convention has been disregarded; the will of the republicans of the party flouted."

"This kind of politics needs no characterization. The campaign commences with an act repugnant to every sense of fair dealing and just representation."

Senator Johnson in his conference today with his campaign manager and others made progress in the plans for the Johnson campaign. It was announced that Senator Norbeck of South Dakota, would head the Johnson primary candidates. Senator Norbeck will be a candidate for delegate-at-large on the Johnson ticket.

The statement issued by Chairman Adams was as follows:

Adams Plays Democrats.

The apportionment of delegates to the 1924 republican national convention gave every congressional district—north and south—one delegate, regardless of its republican strength. As a reward for party activity it gave an additional delegate to every congressional district casting 7,500 republican votes in the preceding presidential election.

The apportionment of delegates to the 1924 republican national convention maintains the principle of giving one delegate to every congressional district. It does this out of justice to congressional districts in the south where the democratic party refuses a free ballot and an honest count to republicans both black and white.

"For the republican party to abandon that principle would be equivalent to its denying republicans of those southern districts any voice whatever in party conventions before the democrats had first denied them the right of citizenship at home."

This would work a double injustice to republicans of such districts and would lead encouragement to further disfranchisement of southern republicans by the dominant democratic machines of the solid south.

Party Stronger in Dixie.

The 1924 apportionment, however, raises from 7,500 to 10,000 the minimum republican vote necessary to give congressional districts an additional delegate. This rule gives extra representation in the party convention to those districts which furnish a free ballot and an honest count to republicans both black and white.

In spite of this increase of 2,500 in the basic vote necessary to give any district two delegates, the "solid south" gains nine district delegates over 1920. This proves a healthy increase of republican party strength in the south which would be rewarded.

Another very important change in the 1924 apportionment is the granting of three additional delegates at large to every state which cast its electoral vote for the republican party candidate. While this does not decrease the actual southern representation in the next republican national convention, it does decrease its relative strength.

"The best way to visualize this fact is to compare the net result of the 1924 apportionment with that of 1920. There were 984 delegates in the 1920 convention. There will be 1,109 in the 1924 convention—an increase of 125. Of this increase the states carried by the republican presidential candidate in 1920 will get 116, while the democratic states of the solid south will get only nine."

Dublin Wealth Grows.

Dublin, Ga., December 13.—(Special.)—Bank clearings for Dublin for the month of November have been made public and reveal an increase of $673,163.91 over the same month of last year. The statement issued is: November, 1922, $4,444,931.21; November, 1921, $3,771,767.30.

Job-Holder Are Party.

"In these states there is no real political party. There is nothing republican in them except a few office-holders absolutely under the direction and control of the administration."

"So Dakota polled 110,000 votes for Harding and is given 13 delegates. Michigan polled 762,000 Harding votes, 50 times as many as South Carolina and Mississippi and is given only 33 delegates. Nebraska polled 350,000 Harding votes, nearly 18 times as many as these two southern states, and has 10 delegates. Indiana with 606,000 Harding votes, 45 times as many as many as these two southern states, has 25 delegates. California, polling 625,000 Harding votes, 44 times as many, is given 23 delegates. New Jersey, with 611,000 republican votes, is given 31 delegates."

FOX IS INSANE, ASSERTS DEFENSE

of Fox following the killing that he had committed the act because Coburn had in his possession certain information which would "ruin" him. It was believed that the paper may prove important in the state's rebuttal of an insanity plea.

Attorney Hugh Dorsey made a strenuous effort to induce Judge Howard to require Solicitor Boykin to produce the paper, but on objection of the solicitor the court ruled that production of the document could not be compelled.

"We will turn our papers over to the defense if the defense will turn theirs over to the state," Mr. Boykin said, in commenting on his objection.

A certified copy of Jack Fox's death certificate was tendered in evidence by Attorney Hugh Dorsey, of counsel for Fox. Solicitor Boykin stressed the statement of the certifying physician that the Fox youth had brought insanity on himself through unwholesome practices.

Recess Is Declared.
Judge G. H. Howard declared a recess at 5:50 o'clock until Friday morning at 9 o'clock at the completion of testimony of Bradley Hogue, editor of the Dallas Times-Herald, of which newspaper Fox was formerly managing editor. The Dallas editor was on the stand for more than an hour, and after he had testified in answer to questions of Robert Allen, Dallas attorney, associated with Attorneys Hooper and Dorsey, in Fox's defense, Mr. Hogue insisted that he had never seen Fox drunk.

The state having rested following a reenactment of the crime by the testimony of several witnesses a brief recess was declared in the middle of the afternoon.

Defense Begins Case.
During the recess counsel for the defense conferred and when the court room was called to order again Attorney Frank A. Hooper gave a brief outline of the defense to the jury.

"We expect to show you that Fox, although born in Montgomery, Ala., spent the greater part of his boyhood in Massachusetts," Attorney Hooper said. "We expect to show you that insanity ran in his family and that in his early manhood he lived under a cloud of fear that he would be a victim of the family trait and become insane."

"We will not deny that he unquestionably shot and killed Captain Coburn under the circumstances that have already been outlined to you."

"We expect to show that a few years ago he left Massachusetts for Texas and that in that state he had a nervous breakdown which increased his fear that some day he would lose his mind."

"This attack occurred in 1918 when the great influenza epidemic was abroad in the land. Philip Fox has never been the same man since that time and we expect to prove it."

Other Attacks Follow.
"We expect to show that this attack was followed by another and another and another, one of the last coming only a short time before he moved to Atlanta."

"We expect to show you that after he came here and got into this atmosphere of unrest and litigation he suffered another attack and that it was while his mind was thus temporarily deranged, while he was laboring under this fearful cloud, that he unfortunately shot and killed Captain Coburn, a man whom he did not know and whom he had nothing against."

"We expect to show you that this was the act of a crazy man, and that because he was insane at the time of the commission of the deed we will ask you to return a verdict of not guilty."

Early family affairs of the Fox family were revealed by Rev. George W. Duffield, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal church of Boston, Mass., the boyhood pastor of the defendant, who was the opening witness introduced by the defense.

Referring to his parish records to refresh his memory, Rev. Duffield said that the Fox family, all members of his flock, lived at 11 Brighton avenue. He said he had preached the funeral for Jack Fox, who died in 1906 when 15 years and 11 months of age.

"Where you acquainted with Philip Fox's father?" Attorney Dorsey asked him.

"Yes, I recall him very vividly now," the minister replied.

"What was the condition of his mentality?"

"Stunned By Reverses."
"My impression is that he was a man who was rather stunned by his business reverses. He had lost a considerable lot of property."

"What about his talking or not talking, or brooding?"

"He was very reticent and gave the impression that he brooded somewhat."

"Did Jack attend school?"

"I don't know. He didn't attend Sunday school."

"Was Jack normal or otherwise?"

"He did not seem normal."

On cross-examination by Attorney William Schley Howard, special counsel employed to assist the solicitor, the minister said he had not seen the defendant since 1906.

"Have you ever heard from him since?"

"Never."

"And you base your recollection of him now principally on your recollection of him when he was a child?"

"Yes."

Spells of Brooding.
The witness reminded him of the brooding spells.

"Philip Fox was such a brilliant boy that you selected him for the teacher of one of your Sunday school classes when he was 17, wasn't he?"

"Yes."

Here cross-examination reverted to Jack Fox.

"Was Jack physically weak?"

"Yes."

"Didn't you know that when he was 6 or 7 years old he suffered an attack of infantile paralysis?"

"I never heard of it."

Mr. Howard asked him if he had read any of Philip Fox's writings since Fox left Boston, especially editorials in "The Imperial Nighthawk," publication of the Ku Klux Klan, of which Fox was editor at the time of the killing.

"I never have," was the answer.

Further cross-examination of the minister developed that Mrs. Fox, the mother of Jack and Philip, was the breadwinner of the family, but that Samuel Fox held an inferior position in a store and that Philip, although a lad, also contributed a small sum to the household expenses.

The minister identified the parish records which Attorney Dorsey tendered in evidence, stating that the entries relating to the Fox family were written by his wife under his direction.

Caused by Convulsions.
Mr. Dorsey then introduced the certified copy of a physician's certificate as to the death of Jack Fox which stated that the death was due to convulsions brought on by violent insanity, which in itself was caused by the boy's personal habits."

Rev. Duffield's testimony was followed by that of five prominent Texans and former associates of the defendant all of whom testified as to Fox's good reputation. They were, in the order of their appearance, Judge Charles Phippen, of the criminal division court at Dallas; Mayor Louis Blaylock, of Dallas, for 30 years publisher of the Texas Christian Advocate; Louis S. Turley, police and fire commissioner of Dallas; Spearman Webb, attorney of Sherman, Texas, and formerly a newspaper man who worked with Fox on the Dallas Times-Herald, and Brantley B. Hogue, editor of the Times-Herald.

Judge On Stand.
Judge Charles Phippen testified that he had known Fox for 10 years.

"What is his general reputation among those with whom he was associated in Dallas as to being a peaceable man?"

"It is good," the jurist replied.

"Well, I wouldn't exactly call it a fight, didn't they?"

"No, I didn't know anything about it."

"Have you knowledge of his arrest when no entry of the arrest was made on the police blotter? Because of his political influence?"

The witness professed ignorance of any such incident.

Dallas Mayor Testifies.
Mayor Louis Blaylock, mayor of Dallas, bank director, former police and fire commissioner, former publisher of the Texas Christian Advocate, official organ of the Methodist church in that state, was next called.

Mayor Blaylock told the jury that he had known Fox for 10 or 12 years and that his reputation was good.

Mayor Blaylock, present police and fire commissioner, gave substantially the same testimony.

The next witness, Spearman Webb, attorney, of Sherman, Texas, and formerly a colleague of Fox while he worked as a newspaper reporter, proved important for the defense.

It was Webb who told the jury that Fox had feared that he would become insane.

In 1912, Webb said, he and Fox roomed together in Dallas. He said that Fox was extremely melancholy at intervals.

"Did he ever talk to you about any hereditary malady in his family of which he was afraid?" asked Attorney Allen, who examined all of the Texas witnesses.

"Mr. Fox told me that he knew," Judge Phippen answered.

His statement was interrupted by Solicitor Boykin, who sprang to his feet in objection to the nature of the question, and after considerable debate Judge Howard permitted the witness to answer.

"Philip Fox said that he lived in dread of some day going insane," Webb said in slow, even tones.

"He married during that year, and sometime prior to his marriage he was talking with me about his future wife, and he asked me if I thought he should tell his fiancée of his fear of going crazy, and I advised against it," he continued.

"Did you ever have any further conversation with Fox with reference to this peculiarity of his?" Mr. Allen asked.

"One time," Webb replied. "I found him in a 'dumpe' I patted him on the back and told him to brace up, and without a word he handed me a letter he had received. It was from his mother, and—"

Boykin Objects Again.
Solicitor Boykin objected to the witness giving the contents of the letter and was sustained. After stating that he knew Fox's reputation was good the direct examination advanced.

Solicitor Boykin then asked: "Who paid your expenses to come here?"

"He did," he was told.

"How much does it cost to come from Sherman to Atlanta?"

"A one-way ticket is $35.85, including Pullman."

"How often have you seen Fox since 1912?"

"Two or three times a year, I suppose."

"He is a very bright man, isn't he?"

"Yes."

"And rather a genius as a writer?"

"Yes."

Editor on Stand.
Bradley Hogue, editor of the Dallas Times-Dispatch, gave considerable information as to Fox's Texas career. He described Fox as an unusually capable newspaper man, a tireless worker, self-sacrificing at all times in the interest of good newspaper work. He said that Fox came to his paper as a reporter and advanced to the position of managing editor.

Hogue testified that Fox had enjoyed good health until the spring of 1918, when he became subject to spells of extreme nervousness.

"On one occasion Fox was in his office writing a story when he felt over unconsciously," he said. He related how Fox had faithfully attended the sickbed of Ed McDaniel, reporter for the Dispatch, the contents of a paper, and how on the day after McDaniel died as a result of the influenza Fox had a nervous breakdown and that his reputation was good.

"In your judgment has he ever fully recovered?"

"He has not."

Hogue told of finding Fox unconscious in a small room in the Dallas city hall. After this incident Fox was confined for two or three weeks.

Fear of Friends.
According to Hogue, Fox seemed to get the impression that his best friends were turning against him, especially when he became unusually despondent. He said that on one occasion he was afraid of trying to "get" his job, when, as a matter of fact, he said, he had a deep affection for him and had no idea of competing with his services.

"He is a drinking man, isn't he?" the solicitor asked, on cross-examination.

"I wouldn't say that he is a drinker."

"Have you ever seen him take a drink?"

"Yes, I have."

"You have seen him take a good many, haven't you?"

"Is it your opinion that when Fox is under one of his hallucinations, he does not know right from wrong?"

The witness replied that he couldn't say.

A wave of laughter swept the courtroom when, at the request of the defense, the editor defined the word, "hallucination."

"A hallucination," he said, "is an obsession or a delusion, a false impression or a wrong impression."

State Opens Case.
The state's case was opened at 9 o'clock Thursday morning. It was shown by the first witness, Clarence Everett, a salesman for the W. H. Perrin company, sporting goods dealers at 60 North Broad street, that the large knife taken from Fox after the killing of Captain Coburn had been purchased on the same day.

Everett identified the knife. He said he sold it to Fox for $4. He said Fox required him to oil the handle and to examine the opening spring before he would close the trade. The knife was seven inches long and had the appearance of a dirk. Everett said that Fox made the statement in the store that he had been "looking for a knife like that for some time."

Fox was indifferent to the testimony as he had been Wednesday to the selection of a jury. He sat with his right elbow on the table of his attorneys and beat an intermittent tattoo on the table with his left hand.

Dr. H. E. Stokbridge, with offices in the Atlanta Trust Company building near Coburn's office, was called.

The physician told how he had rushed to Coburn's side and found him dying. His death occurred before the victim could be removed to a hospital.

Had Found Pistol.
The next witness was Attorney Henry Troutman, who testified that he picked up a pistol off the floor near Coburn's body and placed it on a desk in the law office. Mr. Troutman said he heard four or five shots fired and several piercing screams.

On cross-examination Mr. Troutman said several men had arrived in Coburn's office before him.

W. A. Jones, manager of the Atlanta Trust company building, substantiated the testimony of former witnesses as to the location of Coburn on the floor. While under cross-examination he said he found Fox under arrest on the floor beneath the desk.

"I asked him why he shot Coburn," he said, "and Fox replied, 'I had to do it. I had to do it.'"

Thompson, a former employee of the Klan under the Simmons regime, who was in Coburn's office when Fox first entered, said Coburn was talking over the telephone and that he, Rogers, invited Fox into the office, noting that Fox paused in the doorway.

Claimed "Dirty Deal."
Rogers said that as he entered Fox said, "I'm through with this bunch am leaving town today." Rogers said he asked Fox if he was being handed a "dirty deal" and the reply was "Yes."

"Coburn was busy at the time, and he asked Fox to return later," he said. "When I left the office and went out into the hall I saw Fox go back to Coburn's office." Rogers said that he interpreted "the bunch" mentioned by Fox as being officials of the Imperial Nighthawk, the Ku Klux Klan on Peachtree road. He said that he knew at the time that Fox was editor of "The Nighthawk." He then described how he went down the stairs after Fox, following the shooting. He said he saw another man remove a long knife from the slaver after he had been captured. He said he assisted in the capture.

A. E. Wilson, former law partner of Coburn and tenant of the adjoining office, testified that Fox entered his office on November 5, and asked to be directed to Coburn's office. It was only a short time, he said, before he heard five pistol shots in Coburn's office.

Identifies Desk.
Attorney Wilson identified a flat top desk which sat in front of the jury box as being that of the slain man. Mr. Wilson said that he heard screams and stepped into the hall, where he met Mrs. Holbrook, stenographer to Coburn, who informed him that her employer had been shot.

"I entered Coburn's office and found the body lying face down on the floor," he said. "A pistol was four or five feet away. The desk he used was about three feet away, and I later examined it and found a bullet hole."

A bullet hole in the desk was pointed out to the jury. The witness said that before the shooting the hole was not there. It was indicated that the purpose of this testimony was to show that Coburn was seated at his desk when shot.

Cleveland Woman Testifies.
Mrs. Oscar Heyman, of Cleveland, Ohio, a client of Coburn who was in Coburn's office when Fox entered, followed the lawyer who testified.

"Mr. Coburn told Fox that he was busy and requested him to come back in an hour," the attractive young witness said.

"Fox said, 'I'll be glad to' and left the room," Mrs. Heyman testified.

Mrs. Heyman said she moved over to her attorney's desk and they were waiting to transact their business when the door opened and Fox reappeared with a pistol in his hand.

"He didn't speak a word. He just pointed his gun at Mr. Coburn and began firing. I couldn't move. I watched Fox and then Mr. Coburn, who was seated at his desk. When Fox fired the third time the bullet passed so close to my head I slid out of my chair to the floor."

The witness was then asked to go to Coburn's desk. This she did and indicated the marks made on the desk by the bullets which almost struck her. Mrs. Heyman said that after the second shot Fox exclaimed, "Oh, my God!"

"How long was it after Fox left the office before he re-entered?" She was asked.

"Only a minute. It seemed that he merely opened the door and then immediately re-opened it."

"Describe how Fox did as he used the gun."

"After the first shot he lowered the pistol. There was a pause between each shot. He lowered his arm each time. After the fifth shot, Fox turned and left the office. I followed him and when he reached the hall I screamed to some men to catch him."

Texas Arrive.
The delegation of Texans who came to assist Fox arrived while Mrs. Heyman was on the stand, and before the cross-examination was begun they were sworn as witnesses and excluded from the courtroom.

Cross-examination by Attorney Dorsey elicited the information that as Fox entered the office the first time Thompson Rogers passed him on his way out into the hall. She also said that the two did not speak to each other, a detail in her story which conflicted with that of Rogers.

"Nothing was said about being through with a dirty bunch?" Mr. Dorsey asked.

"Not that I heard. I did hear Fox tell Mr. Coburn he was leaving town that night."

"And Rogers and Fox engaged in no conversation?"

"No, sir. They might have spoken to each other as they passed out but that's all."

Dramatic Testimony.
One of the most dramatic moments of Thursday's session came when Mrs. Holbrook, stenographer, 34, testified that she was in the office before the noon recess, leaned forward in the witness chair and thrust her head into the room of Fox as he was firing on Mr. Coburn.

Solicitor Boykin opened the examination of Mrs. Holbrook by asking if she was employed by Coburn at the time of his death.

"Yes, I was his stenographer," was the reply.

"I wish you would turn to the jury and tell them who killed Captain Coburn and the events leading up to the shooting and immediately following the shooting," said the solicitor.

Describes Shooting.
"As Mr. Coburn was dialing a number on the telephone some man came to the door and opened it. Mrs. Oscar Heyman and W. T. Rogers were in the office with Mr. Coburn and myself. I was writing some letters. Mrs. Heyman and Rogers were waiting to see Captain Coburn."

The man in the door uttered identified as Fox, hesitated on the threshold as if awaiting an invitation. Mr. Coburn turned from the telephone and asked him to come in. The invitation didn't seem to do him any good, so he came in. "Come on in," Fox entered and passed the time of day pleasantly with Mr. Coburn. He didn't speak to me. He even didn't remove his hat in the presence of ladies. He had it slouched down over his forehead. Rogers remained sitting for about a half a minute after Fox entered and then took his overcoat and left the office.

"Fox told Mr. Coburn that he wanted to see him on business. Mr. Coburn told him that he was busy, explaining that the client was waiting to see him. They then agreed on an engagement for one hour later. I remember looking at my watch to see if I would be home in an hour. It was 4:20 o'clock, and I saw that I would be off from work before then."

Smiled Pleasantly.
"As Fox started to leave his expression indicated that he did so reluctantly. Then he smiled pleasantly as he walked to the door, stating that he would return within an hour so that they could talk privately. He paused in the doorway and pleaded for a minute's conversation, however, but Mr. Coburn insisted that he was very busy. There was a look of disappointment in Fox's face."

"He had barely had time to go five steps before he returned and reopened the door. Mrs. Heyman had left her seat near my desk and moved over to the client's chair by Mrs. Coburn's desk. Mr. Coburn had hardly had time to say 'How do you do, Mrs. Heyman?' when Fox returned."

"When Fox returned he just occurred to me that he had forgotten to say something, as a caller sometimes does, and had returned for a final word with Mr. Coburn. I continued with my typewriting. But as he took one stride into the office I looked at it in his hand and a revolting look came over his face. He immediately began firing at Mr. Coburn, and I turned my face and covered it with my hands."

"I never heard screaming groans and screams that followed each shot. Mr. Coburn screamed, 'Oh! Oh!' after each shot. He fell on the floor and the blood was gushing out of his head. He kept writhing and kicking his feet about as if in terrible pain, struggling like a man in agony."

Sits in Death Chair.
At this point Solicitor Boykin asked her to sit in Captain Coburn's chair, which together with the desk, was arranged before the jury box to show in what position he had occupied the chair as he received the shots. She identified the furniture as being that used in the law office.

"Were these bullet marks on the desk before the shooting?" the solicitor asked, indicating holes and scars in the desk.

"While the shooting was going on did Coburn stay in the chair?"

"I didn't turn my head toward him until he was on the floor," Mrs. Holbrook said.

"After firing the shots Fox threw the gun on the floor as he ran as he could. It stopped within a foot of Mr. Coburn."

Threw Down Gun.
"Did you see him throw the gun?"

"Yes, and I saw the demented look in his eyes as he threw it."

"How many shots were fired?"

"Well, I didn't count them, but I know there were a lot of them."

"Tell the jury about how many."

"I am sure there were as many as five."

The solicitor handed her a group of photographs to identify. They showed the office, giving the location of the door, the desk of Coburn and of the stenographer, the chairs, the bookcases, windows and radiator.

Lived Five Minutes.
"Can a person on the stairway leading to the floor above see into Coburn's office?"

"Yes, almost all of Mr. Coburn's desk can be seen through the transom in the stairway."

"How long did Coburn live after he was shot?"

"Probably five minutes. When I saw that Mr. Coburn was going to die I went on into Mr. Wilson's office, near door, and said, 'Oh, Lord, Mr. Wilson, somebody has shot Mr. Coburn.' We went back to him and were with him when he died."

Identifies Clothing.
Mrs. Holbrook, before being excused, identified the clothing worn by Captain Coburn when he was shot, after Attorney Robert Allen had strenuously objected to introduction of the garments, his ground being that the showing of the clothing was prejudicial and could serve no other purpose.

On the statement of Solicitor Boykin that he desired to use the clothing as evidence for the purpose of showing the location of the bullet holes and by the powder marks on the coat to show the proximity of the revolver, the effects were allowed in evidence.

When court was resumed at 1:15 o'clock, Dr. G. C. Blacklock testified for the state that when he examined the body of Coburn he found two bullet wounds. One bullet, he said, had entered the back directly under the right shoulder blade, and another on the right side of the head, while the

"COOKIE" RULE IS ABOLISHED BY SOUTHERN MOGULS

Hans Gets Salary of $35 a Month on First Job

Plays on Steubenville Team With Brother Al; Brother Was Best Known

BY HANS WAGNER.

All during the night while waiting for an answer to my telegram demanding forty dollars a month for my first league job I repeated the words over and over again. My courage in demanding so much sort of scared me.

"I can't come for less than forty a month," I would repeat and wonder if I had done the right thing.

The answer came in the morning. It was simple and direct.

"If you can't accept thirty-five," it read, "you had better stay at home."

I went right up stairs, packed my little things and caught the first train. I took no more chances on losing that thirty-five. Gee, how glad I was at those fellows who had advised me to hold out! I wanted to get to Steubenville before the manager changed his mind.

Arriving at Steubenville I looked up George Moreland and immediately signed the contract. I found it the other day hanging up in the library of the Steubenville club.

It was simple and direct. It was in half but here it is:

STEUBENVILLE BASEBALL CLUB.

George L. Moreland, Manager.

Section 1.—This is to certify that I, William Wagner, have agreed to play in the Steubenville baseball club during the season of 1924 at $250 thirty-five dollars per month, on the first and fifteenth of each month, or as soon as possible.

Section 2.—In signing to play for the Steubenville team I agree to abide by all the rules and regulations of the Steubenville club.

Section 3.—I agree to pay for my own uniform and shoes, the cost of same to be taken out of my first pay.

Section 4.—I agree to report on the date notified by the manager in good condition to play ball.

Section 5.—The manager of the Steubenville team to pay all my expenses while away from home.

GRID SQUAD TO BANQUET TONIGHT

Tonight at 7 o'clock the Georgia Tech banquet will get under way at the Capital City club.

The occasion will mark the official end of all that is connected with the past football season.

The banquet is given each year by the athletic association in honor of the boys who helped to make football history at Tech. This number includes, not only the varsity team, but the scrub team, the rubbers, the field boys, the gameten, the ushers, and in fact all those boys who had a part in making the season.

Alumni in town are urged to be present. The tax for alumni is $5 per plate, payable to Jack Thieson, the alumni secretary. Tickets may be procured all during the day at the Tech "Y," or they may be secured at the banquet.

Lowry Arnold, as customary, will be the best one yet, the success of the banquet is assured.

who afterward played in the major league.

Joe Rickert, Boston; Harry Smith, Pittsburgh; Al Wagner, Brooklyn; Claude Ritchie, Pittsburgh; Carrick, New York. There were one or two others whose names I can't remember.

That will illustrate what I meant when I said there were more great ball players in proportion to the number engaged than there are today. Just think of that many ball players jumping direct from a little bush team into the big league—yes, and making good, every one of them!

At the end of the month—the time when I really got my money, I managed to get a team. He had asked who would like to manage a ball club, and of course I figured it out that such a job would just suit me. The owner was Mr. Taylor, a hardware man. I understand he has been very successful since.

This Adrian team was in the Michigan State league.

As a young manager I lasted double weeks. In the first place I found the pitchers were not so good, or rather that they did not have their heart in their work.

We had a negro pitcher who had a lot of stuff. The other pitchers wanted him fired, but I kept him. The others all claimed to have some arms and all such alibis as that. They were trying to run a sort of boycott.

A Cure for Sore Arms.

I wanted to win those ball games and as the colored boy was the only one who could win for me.

He won, too. In a few days the others gradually lost their sore arms and came back one at a time.

I reckon I was a little too young to be a manager. I worried a right smart about my responsibilities. At the end of three weeks I got mighty homesick. I just couldn't stand to be away off there by myself. I moped around and after awhile was really sick. If you've never been homesick you don't know how terrible the feeling is.

Finally I decided I couldn't stand it any longer and went to join my brother Al. He was glad to see me, of course. Gee, you don't know how I perked up.

Right away Al got busy and figured out a job. He sent me to the Warren, Pa., team of the Iron and Steel league. Again I signed a contract for thirty-five dollars a month and my board while away from home.

I was getting to be a pretty good ball player by this time. It was really the beginning of my career. That Warren club turned out the greatest number of players for the big league of any team in all baseball history.

On that team with me were these

LEE BATTLE FOR THE PATER

Comes now a news dispatch from Macon concerning Lee Battle, the aged and likewise beloved janitor of Mercer university.

"I have lent my freshmans $1,665.65 in my twenty-four years at Mercer and all but sixty-five cents of it is paid back," Lee is quoted as saying, and far be it from us to doubt a single word of it.

There was a time when this scribbler was one of Lee's "freshmans," although he never went farther than that under Lee's tutelage—and since thinking it over, Lee will be mailed a money order for sixty-five cents before this day's sun has set back of the water-works.

It may not be our sixty-five cents that is missing in Lee's most recent capitulation, but recollections that come flocking back after eight years of separation from the Mercer campus and Lee Battle won't let us take any chances.

Lee is indeed a picturesque figure. There's not an alumnus of Mercer who hasn't a recollection of him. His room, on the first floor of the dormitory at Mercer, has long been a sanctuary for freshmen in any state of misery—anything from an application of liniment to a bruise, on through the medical category, to clean collars and the always-available "two bits" was to be found in Lee's great and tumbled store of emergency necessities.

Athletes were chief in Lee's category of pet idolatries. On the walls of his room in those days were pictures of "Stick" Roddenberry, Walter Grace, an old basketball star of Georgia and Mercer; "Skipper" Cochran, one of the fleetest backs southern football has ever known, despite the fact that Mercer, in his day, had notably weak teams; Johnny Westmoreland, whose first fame on the basketball court was won at Mercer when Johnny was a student there; Jake Zellars, of diamond and gridiron renown; Bradley Hogg, Mercer star of many years back who had a big league career; Frank Hunt, one of the best spiltball pitchers intercollegiate baseball has ever known.

Dick Hawes, Lewie Hardage, who coached the Baptist school for a while; Dick Stevens, an all-southern twirler for a couple of years; Tom Willis, Luther Farmer, George Gibson, Charlie Clemens—all of that list of Mercer athletes who won particular renown are special heroes to Lee. Lee used to take great interest in me as a baseball player until he learned of his great dismay that despite a fair proficiency in fielding, I couldn't hit a cow with a bull fiddle.

He'll be remembered, at least one at every school. I've an idea that Burton, out at Gaither, who once waited on table at the "Stewart House" when Emory university was at Oxford, has a name that awakens keen reminiscence in the mind of many an Emory alumnus.

Old Lee is getting along in years now and isn't able to be as lively as he was some years back. He putters around the campus, doing odd jobs and still ministers to the gawky and spindly-legged freshmen who enter that fast-growing institution. And it must be true that old Lee has a bunch of entrancing reminiscences that he retails to the boys that hang about him.

And when he passes—God delay the day—there will be a host of us in this good section of the country who will shed a genuine tear for that beloved figure who may be old, but the enthusiasm which he puts into his business of loving the Mercer student will always be the enthusiasm of youth.

He's a good scout, and as hinted farther back, we're going to send him a money order for sixty-five cents. Couldn't afford to even imagine that we owed Lee anything.

MINORS ACCEPT MODIFIED DRAFT LAW FROM MAJORS

Chicago, December 13.—Two of the class AA minor leagues are on speaking terms with the major leagues again, following the acceptance late Thursday by the Pacific Coast league and the American association of the modified draft law proposed by the majors last year.

Although trades and sales, spurred on by this development, continued to blossom and bloom, most of the late ball magnates were headed for home Thursday night or reserving tickets for the morning.

The modified draft, to which the International—the only remaining non-draft class AA league—refuses to be a party, one man can be drafted each year from each minor club accepting it, but this applies only to players who have been in the minors. The draft price of $5,000 still holds.

The agreement was reached at a meeting of representatives of all four leagues, after various preliminary conferences among the minor league club owners.

Select Hartford.

The second and most prominent meeting of the big baseball week ended on Thursday when the joint meeting of all the minor league owners voted to adopt all the "Landis amendments" as passed by the majors Wednesday, except that involving player limits. The minors, whose organization is called the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs, selected Hartford, Conn., as their next convention town.

Dave Baneroff, the Boston Braves' manager, was probably the busiest man on this fateful day. Dave secured center fielder Jack Kelleher from the Chicago Cubs for the waiver price of $4,000, swapped Horace Ford, second baseman, and Ray Powell, pitcher, for the Braves' "Tiger" Henry Phillips, sold pitcher Fillinger to Beaumont, Texas, and then achieved the feat of signing up Casey Stengel, erstwhile world's series hero, who went from stellar company to cellar company without a murmur.

Most positively denied Thursday that "King" Gleason, veteran White Sox pitcher, was to join the Cubs as coach or assistant manager. Rumors that Gleason will go to Washington to work for Clarke Griffith revived with this, but Clarke is known not to be highly averse to managing his team himself.

Fred Mitchell, former manager of the Cubs and of the Braves, has been given a berth as business manager of the Boston club, and Donie Bush, late manager of the Senators, is expected to take charge of the St. Paul American Association club.

Rip King, former West Virginia all-American football player, has been signed as a catcher for the New Orleans club. King was with the Portland Coast league club for awhile, but had been made a free agent.

Another mighty good looking basketball player is Moreland from Woodbury, Ga. Moreland won a medal last year in the Cotton States tourney as being the best all-around player entered in the tourney. And he looks the part. His every action on the basketball court savors of real class.

FRESHMAN CAGE MATERIAL AT GEORGIA TECH IS EXCELLENT

Dad Amis should develop a remarkable feat when he won four freshman basketball team this year from among his freshman prospects, for he has plenty of good men to work on in spending a good bit of time with them.

Dad's job as basketball coach keeps him on the floor from 10 o'clock until 6 o'clock. All the freshmen candidates have been required to fill out a schedule showing their vacant periods, and the freshmen who wish to make the team report for practice any vacant period they have all during the day.

This arrangement keeps a steady stream of men pouring in for instruction each hour in the day except during the lunch hour.

At that time Dad will begin his real intensive training, intended to mold a basketball team out of his material. The schedule is not on a process of making three or four games are virtually assured, and before the managers finish their correspondence with the freshmen basketball players will have quite a list to pay through.

To Meet Auburn Fresh.

Just now negotiations are on with Piedmont college, at the invitation of Gordon, in Barnesville; with Riverside, in Gainesville; and with the Auburn freshman team.

Dad has three or three real basketball players. One of these is "Red" Felix from Little Rock, Ark. Red played end on the football team and made a good one. He is a nifty goal shooter, and comes to Tech with quite a reputation as a basketball player.

In truth, "Red" bids fair to step into the limelight generally is sports. Last year, Doug Wycoff performed a

TROPHY IS GIVEN TO PETRELS

Presenting to the captain of the "23" football eleven the first trophy that it has been the good fortune of an Oglethorpe force to receive, Dr. Jacobs, in making the donation for J. T. Lupton, friend and member of the founders' board of the university, paid a great tribute to the grid achievements of the Stormy Petrels during the past season.

In making the presentation of Oglethorpe's first trophy, a beautiful silver loving cup, no president of the university spoke of the rise of athletics at the Peachtree road institute, tracing the development, that dates back only a few years when the first Oglethorpe football candidates were forced to pick weeds in one section of the field before they could scrimmage.

The large loving cup, gift of J. T. Lupton, whom Dr. Jacobs characterized as the "best friend that Oglethorpe has or ever will have," bears the following inscription to the Petrel grid players: "In commemoration of the invisible spirit displayed by them during the season of 1923."

The courageous fight, that Oglethorpe teams have put up, especially on the gridiron where heavy opponents have slashed their ranks by their weight and power, has shown well the spirit of the lads playing under the leadership of Coach Robertson and the way in which the stormy birds have delivered has gained for them the respect of a sport-loving community.

Coach Brown, retiring captain of the '23 team, has probably the honor of leading the most successful eleven in the history of Oglethorpe. Besides giving the Tech jackets and the Georgia Bulldogs a good scare, the Oglethorpe Petrels have taken a position on the gridiron that is recognized and respected.

Robertson May Return.

Though it is believed that Coach Robertson will again throw his lot with the Stormy Petrels and return to lead them, it is more successful season than the one just completed, Coach "Jim" had the respect and the loyalty of his charges, and it was mainly accounted for such a good showing.

There is no denying of the fact that material was none too plentiful, but the young men of the Oglethorpe first all-southern representative in the personage of Adrian the prospects for the '24 season on the gridiron seem bright. Out of the list of players lost by graduation and the time limit, there are only one or two positions that will have to be filled. With a roster so profited by the past year of experience and a backfield that carries a great threat, the Peachtree road institute is looking forward to a better year for that grid force.

Jack Is Making Plans for 1924

New York, December 13.—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, arrived in New York today ready to map out his 1924 plan of campaign.

Jack Kearns, his manager, probably will confer with Tex Rickard and within a few days regarding a return match with the "Big Boy." Other engagements but the titleholder probably will not climb into the ring again before the old year.

All of the leading challenges are to be given their chance," said Dempsey. "Tom Gibbons, Harry Wells, and the boys who seem most entitled to a crack at the crown and they'll get it. Whether an elimination tournament will be arranged, I don't know, but unless such a tournament is staged and the best of the three contenders decided, I'm willing to take them on one after the other."

Jack came here to go to work." Kearns declared. "He has been offered a five-figure tour, modern picture engagements and an extended program of exhibitions in this section, but we haven't decided which to accept."

Dempsey made the trip to New York from St. Louis. He was accompanied by a secretary, trainer and pet dog.

The champion may appear either in an exhibition or as a referee of one of the bouts connected with the Christmas fund events at Madison Square Garden next Monday night.

CABLES FOR SPALA TO COME TO U. S.

Newark, N. J., December 13.—Nick Klein, American manager for Ermenia Spala, of Italy, European heavyweight champion, tonight announced he had cabled Spala to come to America and that he expected the fighter to arrive by the third week in January.

Efforts are to be made this week, Klein announced, to interest Tex Rickard in promoting a bout between Spala and Dempsey. Wells, Gibbons or Tommy, Klein stated that Spala had refused to meet Firpo in the Argentine.

Meeting Is Adjourned After Lengthy Session; Joe Guyon Trade Comes as Big Surprise

Chicago, December 13.—(By the Associated Press.)—The general association price for games in the Southern association in 1924 will be fifty cents. This was decided upon at the final meeting of the association here late today.

The price in 1923 was forty cents. In addition to this, it was announced that Little Rock, Mobile and Chattanooga will receive a guarantee of an amount not named in the announcement for games played on tour.

The official statement issued by President John Martin said that the league has provided for a larger participation for these three clubs in the league's treasury receipts from admissions.

President Martin explained that the raising of the price of admission would bring the association on a par with prices charged by the American association, the International league, the Eastern league, the Texas league, the Michigan-Ontario league and several other leagues of lower classification, who are charging prices that prevail in class AA circles.

The "cookie" rule of classifying players used in the Southern association since war-time days was abolished at today's meeting.

The rule, while it was in effect, classified players from class AA leagues as "A" players and men from lower leagues or with no professional league experience as "B" or "C" players. Each team was allowed six "A" players and nine "B" players.

With the abolishment of the rule, clubs are permitted to exercise their own wishes in the proportion of players of varying experience to be carried.

The Southern association adjourned finally tonight, but President Martin announced that he will be busy with the national board as long as that body stayed in session.

The Southern association session proved to be a busy one on trades and sales during the day and these continued into the night when the Nashville club announced that Connie Fields, Carson Lankenshaw and Lefty Harris, all pitchers, had been sold to the London, Ontario, club and that Bob Wells, former manager of the Grand Rapids club, a catcher, had been signed by Nashville. Wells was a free agent.

Joe Guyon Is Traded to Richmond.

Chicago, Ill., December 13.—(Special.)—The trade which sent Joe Guyon, veteran outfielder of the Atlanta association club, to the Richmond Braves, was announced tonight.

Joe Guyon, who played for the Atlanta Braves for a long time, but finally picked Winter Haven.

Old Doc Neidermeyer, veteran catcher, to Bridgeport, Conn.

The Buffalo Internationals were persuaded to come to Rome, Ga., for their spring training tour.

The Columbus American association club announced that the team would train at Winter Park, Fla. The White Sox studied over Winter Park for a long time, but finally picked Winter Haven.

Old Doc Neidermeyer, veteran catcher, to Bridgeport, Conn.

The championship claims are based upon the fact that Georgia played almost every strong S. I. C. contender and did not lose a series to a one of them, winning most of the series rather handily.

CHATTAHOOCHEE FIVE WINS OVER FRESHMEN

Clearmont, Ga., December 13.—(Special.)—The N. G. A. C. freshmen went down in defeat before the first Chattahoochee quintet here today by a score of 17 to 13.

The game was a fast one from beginning to end. Malcom and Massey were the outstanding stars for the freshmen. While the playing of both teams was highly commendable, Chattahoochee has a fast team and the future seems bright for a successful season. They meet Windsor Friday and look horns with Braselton Saturday.

Give Gold Baseball.

Speaking of championships, Thursday morning Dr. Sanford, sent for Coach White and all the varsity members of last year's baseball team and gave to each man a miniature gold baseball as an expression of thanks.

There's something about them you'll like.

New York, December 13.—A continuation of yesterday's buying movement caused a sharp further advance at the opening of the cotton market today. There was a great deal of realizing and considerable southern selling, however, and after much irregular trading prices fell to 35.45, the early high level, to 34.60 for January. Closing prices were approximately the lowest of the day with the market easy at net declines of 10 to 15 points on present crop deliveries except July which was 15 points net higher. Coming crop months were 10 to 110 points net higher.

The market opened strong at an advance of 20 to 75 points on present crop positions, but unchanged to 40 points lower on the later delivery which seemed to be without much support. Buying on yesterday's crop figures was encouraged by relatively firm cables and the active positions sold 45 to 80 points net higher during the early trading with December touching 35.10, March 35.75 and July 35.10. These prices represented advances of between 25 and 300 points as compared with the low levels touched the break of last Monday, and were evidently high enough to attract a good deal of profit-taking. December appeared to be relatively weak and between 20 and 30 notices were reported in circulation, July, on the other hand, was relatively firm and there were sharp changes in differences between months which were regarded as realignments following the violent price movements.

After showing declines of about 60 to 85 points from the early high prices, the market shot sharply upward early in the afternoon on a flurry of covering accompanied by talk of probable full domestic consumption figures from the active bureau tomorrow. Most of the losses were recovered but the advance ran into increased southern selling and a renewal of liquidation of active prices into new low ground for the day in late trading. December broke to 35.10; March, to 35.00, and July to 34.50. Reports of the active bureau showed that the cotton department from December 22 to January 10 have been a factor on the late decline.

LOSSES SEEN AT NEW ORLEANS.
New Orleans, December 13.—After a rise of 35 to 40 points in the early trading today the cotton market turned reactionary and gradually lost ground. The decline lasted practically to the close. Several periods of recovery set in but none of them were important or sustained. Late in the session prices were 55 to 70 points under the late trading of yesterday and the final transactions of the day were at net losses of 55 to 60 points. January, after rising to 35.02, fell off 34.50, while its last sale was at 34.61.

There were two reasons for the opening decline, an accumulation overnight of buying orders, mainly in the interior, and the strength of Liverpool, coupled with claims from Manchester of a better business in cottons, more particularly with reference to the market in rather promptly and was partly due to realizing by buyers of the late couple of days and partly to new selling on the theory that the reaction from the high levels of the season still had some way to go and that extended advances were hardly probable until after the turn of the year.

The most important selling appeared in the late session and the reason for this was expected to be the private figures from the census bureau on the opening tomorrow on consumption in this country during November which expectations were based on the private bureau estimate of some days ago of 208,000 bales against 241,000 in October.

NELSON TO RECOVER FROM PISTOL WOUND

J. L. Nelson, 34, of 68 McDaniel street, who was shot accidentally when his sister, Mrs. C. S. Holton, of 71 McDaniel street, attempted to wrest a revolver from his hands Thursday morning, will recover, according to physicians at Grady hospital Thursday night.

Mrs. Holton told police that her brother had been despondent for some time as a result of separation from his wife and that he had threatened to "end it all" on several occasions. A note, hinting suicide, was found in Nelson's room, the police stated.

Nelson's three small children, two girls, nine and seven years old, and a three-year-old boy, Thursday were taken by the Salvation Army and placed at the army's emergency home, 28 East Pine street, until suitable arrangements can be made for their care. Ensign McCrea, investigating officer of the army, said that they will be given every care in the meanwhile.

According to Ensign McCrea, the army was instrumental in effecting a temporary reconciliation between Mr. and Mrs. Nelson about two years ago, when Mrs. Nelson came to the army emergency home and said her husband had deserted her. Upon investigation it was found that her husband had gone to Rome to find work.

Ensign McCrea said that family relations continued to grow worse between the couple and that recently Nelson had ordered his wife to leave home. Mrs. Nelson left and efforts to locate her since have proved futile, he said.

The Salvation Army was notified of the case immediately after the shooting and after investigating, took charge of the children.

Agnes Scott Choral Society Presents Handel's 'Messiah'

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

One of the finest examples of oratorio in musical history, Handel's "Messiah," was given a creditable presentation by the Agnes Scott Choral society under the auspices of the Atlanta Music club, at the Wesley Memorial church, Thursday night.

The work of the soloists, Miss Margaret Battle, soprano; Miss Strehel Walton, contralto; H. R. Bates, bass, and A. W. Browning, tenor, was particularly effective, but the choral society rose to the highest pinnacles of interpretation in the rendition of the mighty chorus and the tremendous final ensemble, the "Hallelujah Chorus."

In the first part the oratorio interprets the longing of the world for a Savior, a Messiah, the prophecies pointing to His coming and His miraculous birth. "Comfort ye my people," words of the Prophet Isaiah, were given in instrumental preludes preparing the way for the opening tenor chorus and the tremendous glorious overwhelming choral work.

PIERRE VAN PAASSEN TO ADDRESS CIVITANS

Pierre Van Paassen, of the Constitution editorial staff, will be principal speaker at the weekly luncheon of the Civitan club at the Ansley hotel at 12:30 o'clock today.

Mr. Van Paassen has been a close student of international affairs, particularly the political and economic questions of Europe. He will discuss the reparations question and the occupation of the Ruhr and its effect on commercial and industrial Europe.

"Do you think the landlords ought to make us pay in advance?" "I'm afraid I'd never pay otherwise. I've nothing more so valuable as rent I've had."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

came with the declaration of the truth of the Messiah's prophecy, "And the glory of the Lord shall be revealed." The recitative for the bass, "Thus saith the Lord of hosts," is followed by human doubt and apprehension in the great aria, also for bass. "But who may abide the day of His coming?"

"O thou that tellest good tidings to Zion" is the contralto solo and chorus that follows the prophetic era. The pastoral symphony, a tone picture of the serene calm and peace of the shepherds feeding their flock on Judea's hillsides in the starry velvet of the oriental night was given a fine rendition.

The chorus of angels heralds the birth of the Messiah, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace," came like a tremendous climax following the recitation passages giving the message of the angels.

Through the Agnes Scott society maintained a high caliber of interpretation, but its greatest triumph came with the passage that has often been called the greatest musicians of the world. "The Hallelujah Chorus."

SHOALS LEASE BILL INTO HOUSE HOPPER

Washington, December 13.—Representative Dickinson, republican, Iowa, today introduced his bill for the lease of Muscle Shoals to Henry Ford for the manufacture and sale of fertilizer. The bill specifies that the property be operated to produce the maximum output of electric power, all of which would be sold under authority of the federal power commission. The leasing company would be limited to a net profit of 8 per cent.

To Ship 20,000 Rabbits.
Hutchinson, Kan., December 13.—Twenty thousand cotton tail rabbits will be shipped to the state game preserves of Pennsylvania by K. C. Beck, Hutchinson naturalist, commencing Friday, December 14, he announced today. Mr. Beck has a contract to replenish the game preserves of the Keystone state with rabbits.

Albert S. Adams Named President Of Realty Board

Albert S. Adams, prominent Atlanta realtor and business man, was elected president of the Atlanta Real Estate board at the final meeting for 1923 at the Capital City club Thursday night.

Other officers elected were Frank Adams, first vice president; R. R. Smith, second vice president; George T. Northern, secretary, and E. M. Chapman, Jr., treasurer. Nine directors were selected by ballot from a list of fourteen names submitted by the nominating committee, as follows: Ward Whitely, Benjamin D. Watkins and Dana Belser, for the three-year term; R. W. Evans, Forrest Adair and M. C. Kiser, for the one-year term.

George M. Brown, Jr., retiring president, was presented with a beautiful silver fruit service, President-elect Adams making the presentation at the close of Mr. Brown's farewell address. Both the retiring president and L. W. Reeves, retiring secretary, were shown many evidences of esteem and confidence during the evening by members of the board.

Gets Big Ovation.
President-elect Adams, before accepting the nomination, exacted a promise that the new officers loyal support toward making the real estate organization one of the most active civic forces in the city. This pledge was made by a rising vote and Mr. Adams received an ovation as he announced his acceptance and resignation.

The new president of the realty board is not a new figure in civic organizations. He has been a member of the Atlanta Rotary club and is a member of a number of other civic organizations of the city. At present he is president of the Stone Mountain Monumental association.

Reports of Officers.
Reports of officers of various departments showed that real estate board affairs are in an excellent condition and that splendid things are expected of the organization during the coming year.

The multiple listing bureau, an innovation in local real estate circles, was the subject of a report by George T. Northern, chairman, who showed that the bureau had taken in many members during the few weeks of its operation and that it had proven a great success.

Upshaw Is Mentioned For Vice President; "Not With Al Smith"

Macon, Ga., December 13.—(Special.)—"If the vice presidency of the United States were offered me on a silver platter and Al Smith was on that platter with his liquor platform, I would smash it beneath my feet," Will D. Upshaw, congressman from the fifth district, in an address to the student body of Mercer university this morning at the chapel hour.

Reference to the probable candidacy of Mr. Upshaw was made by Dr. P. Montague, dean of the university, in introducing the congressman. He referred to a recent nomination of Frank D. Easton, of the Eastern Men's League of Massachusetts, in which Will D. Upshaw's name was proposed as a candidate for the second place on the democratic ticket.

OFFICIALS ARE CHOSEN IN EMMANUEL COUNTY

Swainsboro, Ga., December 13.—(Special.)—Emmanuel county officials were elected in the primary held here yesterday. The following officers were elected: I. W. Rountree, solicitor city court; R. E. Rountree, county school superintendent; and E. Warren, county surveyor, all unopposed.

Alfred Herrington, Jr., defeated George Kirkland, Jr., incumbent, for judge of the city court by 560 majority; W. A. Gray and John J. Morris tied in the race for ordinary and will have to run in the second primary next Wednesday. John R. Powell, Jr., was re-elected clerk of the superior court by a majority of 27 over both his opponents. He defeated the next man, Dennis N. Thompson, by a plurality of 529 votes. G. F. Flannery was elected sheriff over Otis Coleman, incumbent, by 201 votes. M. H. Blount and W. P. Scott led in the race for tax collector, M. H. Peebles and J. A. Watson led in the race for treasurer, and these races will be run over in the second primary.

CALHOUN FARM AGENT TO GET SALARY RAISE

Arlington, Ga., December 13.—(Special.)—County Agent A. E. Gibson's salary will be increased by $360 next year, according to R. H. Bostwick, chairman of the board of county commissioners. Mr. Bostwick states that a delegation of Calhoun county citizens appeared before him requesting that the county agent's salary be raised, due to the fact that another county was attempting to secure Mr. Gibson as a county agent demonstrator at a salary that was $360 in excess of his salary in this county.

The county agent's salary then will be $3,060 a year; $1,500 of which is paid by the federal government and the rest by the county out of the educational fund.

HANCOCK AND SPARTA TO ADVERTISE WIDELY

Sparta, Ga., December 13.—(Special.)—The Hancock County Bookers' club is preparing to send out advertising matter which will put Sparta and Hancock county "on the map." Every mercantile business man in the city will have his stationery especially printed telling of the various advantages of this locality. The city council has passed a resolution offering free taxes and water to any manufacturing enterprise that will locate here. It is proposed to make this offer for a five-year period. Many inquiries have been received by the secretary. The work is being pushed also by County Agent Truitt, who is an active worker in the organization.

ASK NEW TRIAL FOR MRS. DUREN

Waycross, Ga., December 13.—Motion for a new trial in the case of Mrs. Nora Duren was filed today by attorneys for the defense in court here. A hearing will be had before Judge J. L. Sumner at an early date. Mrs. Duren was found guilty of the murder of Ira James by a jury here yesterday with recommendation to mercy. She was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Mrs. Duren was indicted for shooting and killing James, a truckman for the Hebard Cypress Express company, in the store which she operated at Hopkins on August 14.

Testifying in her own behalf, Mrs. Duren declared that she shot James in self-defense when he grappled with her in her store. She alleged, in her testimony, that he had made improper advances.

Witnesses testified that on three occasions Mrs. Duren sent for James to come to the store to settle an account he was alleged to have owed her. Mrs. Duren denied she sent for James.

NO WONDER THE KING WAS A BIT NERVOUS

Copenhagen, December 13.—King Christian spent several hours in a nervous state overnight, according to the newspaper Klokken Fem today, having received yesterday an anonymous letter saying his country residence, Frederiksberg Castle, would be destroyed by fire, and it had been decided to kill him, the queen and the crown prince. Precautionary measures were taken, but nothing happened.

Coolidge Favors Private Charity To Aid Germans

Washington, December 13.—President Coolidge, through Senator Lenroot, of Wisconsin, announced tonight that the administration approves and desires to encourage to the utmost private charity for the relief of the people of Germany.

Senator Lenroot, after two conferences during the day with the president on the question of German relief, sent this telegram to A. C. Backus, of Milwaukee, chairman of the committee in charge of the German relief campaign in Wisconsin:

"In the newspaper conference of December 11 President Coolidge urged the newspaper reporters not to say anything 'that would result in drying up the private charity that is being encouraged' and further stated:

"It is very desirable that the private charity that is being organized should go on. It is under the direction of such men as General Allen (Major General Henry T. Allen) and I believe, General Dawes (Charles G. Dawes, former director of the budget) who is his director in his region, and other men of like caliber; and of course we are very much desirous that it should go on.' Any statement contrary to this is a misrepresentation of the position of President Coolidge."

Mr. Coolidge at the same newspaper conference said that returned to in the telegram let it be known that he believed any plan for government relief for Germany should be on a business basis, and this expression of view was misinterpreted in some parts of the country as opposed to the efforts of private charity.

The German relief situation was understood to have been discussed by the president today with Secretary Hoover, and Senator Lenroot, after talking over the situation with the president, announced that he would withhold request for action on his bill to appropriate $20,000,000 for German food relief pending efforts to bring about an international food

CLARKESVILLE ELECTS OFFICIALS FOR YEAR

Clarkesville, Ga., December 13.—(Special.)—Clarkesville held its annual city election yesterday and the following officers were elected to serve for the coming year: F. L. Asbury, mayor; W. S. Erwin, J. E. Stewart and J. H. Asbury, councilmen; and Dr. W. H. Garrison, F. D. Singleton, I. N. Foster and H. E. Edwards, members of the board of education.

NAME COMMISSIONS FOR TOOMBS COUNTY

Lyons, Ga., December 13.—(Special.)—Two elections were held in different parts of county yesterday to elect county commissioners. In the district around Lyons, Dan Odum, the present chairman of the board of county commissioners was re-elected without opposition. In the other election, which was a close contest between E. W. Clifton and W. L. Harden, Mr. Clifton was elected by a majority of 35 votes, according to unofficial reports from the voting precincts.

News of Society and Woman's Work

Bucknell-Potter Engagement Announced at Lovely Luncheon

An announcement of unusual social importance and distinction was that of the engagement of Miss Sue Cunningham Bucknell and Dixon Bayard Potter, of New York, which was made by Clark Howell, Sr., in behalf of Dr. and Mrs. Howard Bucknell, parents of the bride-elect, at a luncheon given Thursday at the Piedmont Driving Club. The wedding will take place in February and will be a brilliant event in which Atlanta and New York society will be interested.

Fourteen intimate girl friends of Miss Bucknell were invited for luncheon and were seated around the exquisitely appointed luncheon table placed in the gray dining room of the club.

A French basket graced the center of the table holding yellow and lavender flowers, the handle showered in violets, and decorated with a French bouquet of yellow snapdragons and lilacs. Radiating from the centerpiece were yellow and lavender ribbons extending to the place of each guest, and finished with French bouquets of yellow and lavender flowers. The chandeliers were veiled with maidenhair fern which formed a feathery canopy of green, while the place cards bore the hostess' crest in gold. On the back of each artistic card was the formal announcement of Miss Bucknell's and Mr. Potter's engagement, which was read by Mr. Howell just after the group of attractive young girls were seated. Although there had been no previous intimation of the announcement, many happy and appropriate toasts were proposed to the health and happiness of the bride-elect and groom-to-be.

Miss Bucknell was gowned in gray velvet, combined with gray fox, and her turquoise blue velvet hat was trimmed with ostrich. She wore a corsage bouquet of orchids. Miss Bucknell is the representative of aristocratic Georgia and Pennsylvania families, which have been identified with the early history of America. On her maternal side, she is the granddaughter of the late Judge John Daniel Cunningham and Mrs. Cornelia Dobbins Cunningham, of Atlanta. Judge Cunningham, a native of Virginia, and an esteemed and influential citizen of Atlanta, was one of the early settlers, and her maternal great-grandfather, Miles Dobbins, was one of the first bankers of Atlanta. She is a niece of Major Alfred Austell Cunningham, who served with honor and gave valuable service to his country during the World war, and is in command of the marine barracks at Parris Island. She was educated at Laur Coho Institute in Athens, going to National Cathedral school in Washington, D. C., for three years, afterward finishing her education at Miss Baird's school in East Orange, N. J. Following her graduation Miss Bucknell and her mother traveled in Europe for eighteen months. On her paternal side she is a granddaughter of Mrs. William Bucknell, of Philadelphia, who is well known for her literary ability, having contributed many splendid articles to magazines, and whose books are quite famous. Mrs. Bucknell is the daughter of the late Dr. William Ward, a notable American, who lived a greater part of his life in India, devoting his time and marvelous mentality to translating the Hindustani language. Her grandfather, the late William Bucknell, was a highly honored man, and lived in Philadelphia. He endowed Bucknell university at Lewisburg, Pa., and gave a Baptist Theological college to Chester, Pa. He was a collector of rare masterpieces of paintings from the Old World. Dr. Bucknell, her father, is one of the leading specialists of Atlanta, and highly esteemed in his profession.

Miss Bucknell would have been in the list of popular debutantes this winter had she decided to be formally presented to society. She is one of the most beautiful young girls in the south and her perfect blondism and beauty is an inheritance from her mother, whose name she bears, and from her lovely aunt, the late Mrs. Ruth Cunningham Raul, an acknowledged belle. Beauty is not her only charm, however, for she possesses a radiant personality, graciousness of manner and sweetness of disposition. Harland Bucknell, of Atlanta, and Howard Bucknell, of China, are brothers.

Mr. Potter is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Clifford Potter, of New York, and his family is connected with the oldest Colonial lines of New York. The home of great-grand parents on his maternal side at Eighty-sixth street and Riverside Drive still remains intact, and is known as the only wooden house now standing in the city. It is here that his mother, who was the beautiful Miss Margaret Somerville, spent her youth in her childhood days, and it is still the home of his parents.

Mr. Potter is a descendant of wealthy and influential families who have figured prominently in the upbuilding of New York. He is a graduate of Princeton in the class of 1918, and has held membership in the leading social and business clubs. He is well known in the financial world.

Mr. and Mrs. Potter open their summer home at East Hampton each season where they entertain in elegant fashion. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Van Pelt, of Atlanta, are his cousins. Mr. Potter served as an officer in the naval reserve corps during the World war.

An admired figure at many of the social affairs of the month is Miss Mary Sadler, of Charlotte, N. C., who is visiting Miss Mary Sadler at her home on Thirteenth street. Among those who are entertaining in her honor are Miss Sadler, Miss Emmie Nixon, Mrs. Wayne Martin, Mrs. George Forrester and Mr. and Mrs. Lowry Arnold.

P. Ford Clark Will Be Host.

P. Ford Clark will entertain Miss Virginia Maule and a party of debutantes on Saturday. They will have luncheon in the Blue room at the Ansley hotel, and afterwards Mr. Clark has arranged for a box party at the Howard theater.

Miss Maule is one of the season's prettiest and most popular debutantes. This party is one of a number of parties that have been planned in her honor.

Gutzon Borglum Will Lecture.

Mrs. W. M. Willis, chairman of the art department of the West End Woman's club, announces a lecture by Gutzon Borglum Saturday, December 15, in the Sunday school room of the West End Presbyterian church at 3:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Murray Howard, president, feels there are many outside the club who would be interested in what Mr. Borglum has to say, therefore, she invites the public to attend. Mr. Borglum needs no more introduction to an Atlanta audience than does Stone mountain itself.

The West End Presbyterian church is on the corner of Gordon and Ashby streets.

Reviewers' Class Is Entertained.

Mrs. J. B. Jackson was hostess Wednesday afternoon at her home on Piedmont avenue to the Reviewers' study class.

An interesting feature of the afternoon was the paper read by Mrs. C. R. Walker on "Education, Schools and Universities."

The subject being studied for the year by the Reviewers is "Through Spain and Portugal."

The officers of the class are Mrs. George Brietenbacher, president; Miss Ella W. Smilie, past president; Mrs. J. B. Jackson, recording secretary; Mrs. Walker Dunson, corresponding secretary; Miss Irene Smith, treasurer.

Presidents' Tea At Woman's Club Enjoyable Affair

More than one hundred members of the Atlanta Woman's club, both old and new, assembled at an informal tea Thursday afternoon at the club house. The affair proved a delightful social event.

Receiving with the president of the club, Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, were Mrs. M. L. Throver, Mrs. Rupert Hall, Mrs. J. B. McNally, Mrs. Norman Ponder, Mrs. George Brandon, Mrs. John R. Hornaday, Mrs. Fred Wilder, Mrs. Henry W. W. Staff, Mrs. W. B. Roberts, Mrs. C. P. Byrd, Mrs. James L. Logan, Mrs. E. C. McCarty and others.

Crimson poinsettias and evergreens were used throughout the club rooms where the guests were received, and on the tea tables silver candelsticks held red tapers.

Punch was served from the handsome silver bowl recently presented to the club by Mrs. Norman Sharp. Mrs. George Brandon was responsible for the decorations.

A delightful program was rendered during the afternoon and was in charge of Miss Lily Allen.

Pretty Young Girls Are Named Sponsors For Saturday Game

Miss Margaret Perkins and Miss Marguerite Gresham, two of Atlanta's most attractive young women, have been selected sponsors for the Clemson-Athletic club basketball game to be held Saturday evening at the town clubhouse of the Atlanta Athletic club.

Miss Perkins will sponsor the Athletic club, while Miss Gresham will be sponsor for Clemson.

The Saturday night game will be the first of a series of basketball games to be given by the Atlanta Athletic club. These games have proven heretofore to be among the most delightful mid-winter social events, always followed by dancing.

The annual Christmas dinner-dance will be given at the East Lake Country club Tuesday evening, December 25. The most brilliant social affair to be given during the year will be the annual New Year's Eve ball at the Elks Lake club. Reservations are now being made for both of these events.

attractive young sister, Miss Frances Traylor, who will return from Gunston hall in Washington, D. C., to spend the Christmas holidays.

A number of other delightful social affairs will be given in honor of Miss Traylor.

Dr. B. G. Loveridge Appointed Chairman Of Literary Program

Dr. Blanche Grosbeck Loveridge, of "Little Pines," Peachtree Way, Atlanta, Ga., has been appointed by Mrs. Archibald P. Brantley, president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, as chairman of the division of literature and club programs, a subdivision of the department of fine arts of the state federation. Request is made by Dr. Loveridge that all Georgia club women planning to enter the national literary contest conducted by Mrs. J. A. Miller of Colorado, chairman of the same division in the work of the general federation, send to her by December 20, all entries into the poetry contest, and by February 1, all entries in the prose contest.

Announcement of both these contests have appeared in print several times during the fall season, and Mrs. Brantley urges that all Georgia club women possessed of talent in this line enter the competition, in order that they may not only compete for the prize, but that they may also contribute to the general federation the fact that many Georgia women are possessed of a high degree of proficiency in creative writing.

Prizes offered by the general federation include $25 for the best poem, $50 for best prose article, $35 for second best, $25 for third, and $15 for fourth.

Rule for poem: No restriction on form or theme. Limit 50 lines. Must be original, never published. Must have been written since December 20, of last year.

Rule for prose article: Subject—"What Two Million Women Want From the Publishers." Must show frankness and sincerity of opinion, understanding of American ideals.

Constructive thought will count more than literary style. Limit 500 words. Manuscript must be typed, name and address of club must appear on each page of the manuscript. Winning articles become property of general federation. No manuscript will be returned, therefore a carbon copy should be kept by author. All contestants must be members of a club federated with the state organization.

Dr. Loveridge was formerly president of Elizabeth Mather college of Atlanta, and is an alumnae of the University of Chicago. At present Dr. Loveridge is in great demand as a lecturer on mental health and psychological subjects and has been lecturing for the past three months under the auspices of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs to a large audience composed in the main of club women who have attended regularly from the first lecture on through the 12th lecture with which the series ended on December 11. Dr. Loveridge's degrees were conferred upon her by the University of Chicago after post-graduate work there and at the Sorbonne in Paris.

"Our state division of literature indeed will be fortunate in having Dr. Loveridge as chairman. Mrs. Brantley stated in announcing the appointment, 'and the cultural work of our clubs will receive new inspiration from Dr. Loveridge's high ideals and remarkable personality.'"

Bazar and Supper This Evening.

A carnival, bazar and supper will be given at the Atlanta Normal Training and John F. Faith school on this evening, beginning at 6 o'clock. Supper will be served between the hours of 6 and 9. Other things on sale will be home-made cakes and candies, sandwiches, wieners, ice cream, hand-made articles, suitable for Christmas gifts, Christmas cards, tags and seals, dressed dolls and other toys; other features will be the "country store," gramophone and several plays by the Normal students.

The History of Fine Silk Hosiery and Its Present-Day Meaning to You

Ten or fifteen years ago, before silk hosiery was generally worn or manufactured in any volume, due largely to its extremely high cost, we were supplying the best silk hosiery and studying the needs of our patrons in this very important part of their apparel. Since that time silk hosiery has constantly and tremendously increased in its usage and today is worn by everyone who is discriminating in their dress.

During this period of constantly increasing demands a great deal of hosiery, which we term "just silk hosiery," has been offered to, and has been used by you, which has not given the satisfaction either in looks or wear that a really good silk stocking could. This class of "just silk hosiery" was expensive, however low the price, because these goods were produced, due to new and inexperienced manufacturers coming into the field who had never made silk hosiery before, and who did not honestly endeavor to give the best article possible for the price, but who were satisfied to let excessive demand for supply account for all their shortcomings. They resorted to the usual short cuts and compromises incident to the desire for so-called "bargain prices" and the public lost in buying goods that would not wear.

Today we feel the silk hosiery industry has brought its production up to satisfy the demands, and you no longer have to buy this indiscriminate "just silk hosiery," but can buy hosiery which will afford you a satisfaction and pride that you should have in this very important part of your wardrobe.

During all this period of rapid development of silk hosiery manufacturing, there were certain exceptional mills which held rigidly to high standards, and their products were always dependable.

As a result of our long experience we have selected Gordon as the hosiery which we can positively recommend for long wear, smart style, economy and general satisfaction.

We have carefully experimented with the wearing qualities of these stockings in our own store and among our best customers, and have found the utmost satisfaction in the qualities we recommend to you. We believe you will find these stockings to be the most economical you can buy, not necessarily in their first cost, but in the consistent service and satisfaction they will afford you. They are not made to fit a particular price with quality and workmanship secondarily considered, but are manufactured to suit the economical requirement of their wearers. We announce an extraordinary showing of Gordon Hosiery, especially featuring the pure dyed silk numbers: 290, H300 and H600.

Gordon

HOSIERY

For extra hard wear we recommend Gordon H300, pure dyed heavy silk leg, with extra quality lustrous mercerized lisle top and sole, with extra heavy splicing in heel and toe. This number is especially suited to people who give their hosiery hard usage, and it will also maintain its handsome and heavy appearance during its entire time of service. This number we offer in black and a complete range of evening and street shades at $2.50 per pair. We also carry it in extra wide sizes at $3.00 per pair. We have had users of this popular number inform us that one pair of this number had frequently outworn two pairs of ordinary "just silk stockings."

For those who do not require the extra wear of a heavy stocking, we are offering Gordon No. 290. This is the finest stocking made to retail at $2.00, and we offer it to you in a full assortment of colors. We have not found its equal for appearance and service, and with its beautiful pure dyed silk leg and lustrous and elastic medium weight lisle top and sole and reinforced heel and toe, it is a wonderful value at this price.

Gordon H600 at $3.00 is the all-silk stocking de luxe, with the lisle interlining in hem and reinforcing in the foot. It affords a handsome appearance, yet gives sturdy wear. We have selected this stocking as the best fitting and most beautiful in appearance, as well as offering the same economical wearing advantages of Gordon Hosiery.

WE are carrying in stock at all times a complete assortment of Gordon Hosiery for infants and children, and all the staple lines of ladies' hosiery. We recommend this well-known brand for your consideration. We feel it represents the best values for service and style possible to procure, and is priced so reasonably that we are sure it will appeal to your ideas of value.

The Lady of Pentlands

BY ELIZABETH JORDAN

"It's unthinkable that B. G. should break a promise," he went on; "least of all a promise to Lilian on her deathbed. But even assuming he did break it, he'd despise himself for doing it, and Valerie would despise him, and sooner or later both would be healthy sorry he hadn't kept it. Can you see any happiness in that situation?"

His tone suggested that she had better not, and Anne hastened to assure him she didn't. She spoke rather absently. The topic was absorbing, but she had reached all Perry's conclusions during the day. Also her subconscious mind was on clothes—dream clothes, clothes that would make Perry's eyes shine. She and Valerie had spent the afternoon in the shops.

"There's no more infernal situation than that for a man and woman," she heard Perry go on. "In love, married, and yet held apart by hands stretched out from the grave."

Anne Sterling stirred restlessly, reflecting that there were times when her lord's speech was almost too vivid. She ventured to remind him that the two he was discussing were not as yet in love.

"Humph!" Perry jerked out. "Is there any doubt in your mind that they will be?"

Anne asserted there was, and maintained her point with surprising firmness in the face of her husband's scornful incredulity.

"Valerie doesn't intend to allow anything of that kind to happen," she told Perry, regretfully detaching her thoughts from clothes for a moment. "She'll go to Pentlands wrapped in plans for her new work as in a mackintosh. She'll be cool, friendly, busy, and absolutely matter of fact. B. G. would have to penetrate layers and layers of that sort of thing to reach any sentiment in her. If he were starting out with the idea of making her care for him he'd do it. But as that's just what he doesn't want, he'll appreciate and imitate her attitude."

"There's going to be the deuce to pay all around, sister, especially if—B. G. will both be wretched. Perry insisted to Anne. "I'm going to tell B. G. exactly what I think of that hare-brained scheme of his," he drowsily muttered.

Anne seemed to be talking about colors—wanting, of all things, and at that hour of the night, to know what his favorite colors were. He gathered the impression that Valerie's trousseau was under discussion.

"Why, I don't know what colors I like. I like 'em all," he sleepily told Anne. "Guess you do, too," he added, with a grin that was lost in the darkness. "You don't seem to let—many—of—em—get—away."

He dreamed that Valerie, lightly clad in a rainbow, was standing at the altar with B. G. His favorite favorite clergyman, the Rev. Henry Wallace, slowly emerged from a coffin to marry them. It was an unpleasant dream, and it did nothing to brighten the jaundiced vision with which during the next few days he contemplated his friend's matrimonial venture.

Nevertheless, though he would not admit it, there was a certain reassurance in Valerie's attitude, as Anne had prophesied. Here was no nervous, harassed victim of an experiment predestined to failure, but an alert and philosophic young person who obviously would enter upon her new life as mistress of Pentlands as coolly as if she were going there to be Mrs. Chaim's social secretary. Gone at in that spirit, Perry reflected, with B. G. meeting it half way, as he certainly would do, the thing might work out without disaster, especially if—

The "if" was so important that he hastened to put it before Anne, who in turn, briskly put it before Valerie. "You must be careful, my dear," she warned her friend, "not to let the servants here or at Pentlands get the slightest hint of the well-known unusual relation between you and B. G. In fact, absolutely no one must know it but we four. I don't know whether you have thought of that. But you can see plainly, can't you, that if it did get out the whole plan would fall through. You would have no authority; and your position would be impossible."

She stopped. Valerie was staring at her, all the blood in her young body seemingly rushing to her face and dyeing her forehead to the roots of her bronze hair.

"You hadn't thought of that, had you?" Anne asked, mercifully glancing away. She had never seen her friend bluish before.

"No," Valerie admitted, rather faintly. "I—hadn't."

"But you see the point?" Anne persisted.

"Yes, I—yes, of course I do. You are quite right."

With that Valerie dropped the subject. Her specialty these days appeared to be the dropping of subjects Anne introduced. Miss Knight's dropped subjects were like Betty's kisses: the house was cluttered up with them.

"Just the same," Anne contentedly reflected, "she'll pick this one up again. She'll have to talk it over with me."

But in this Anne Sterling was wrong. Valerie had already placed a well defined boundary line to mark the point past which not even this fine and understanding friend could follow her into her unique relation. The first of Anne's new gowns came home on Wednesday afternoon, tossed off by Madame Bousard in a little matter of forty-eight hours, and after that excitable artist had filled the atmosphere surrounding the Fifth avenue emporium with shrill assurance that the thing could not be done. Anne decided to wear the gown at dinner that night, when the Sterlings were dining quietly at home with their house guest. Thus there would be nothing to interfere with the study of Perry's brightening face as he took in his wife's ensemble.

THE BRIGHT SHAWL

By Joseph Hergesheimer.

NEXT WEEK: "Paradise Garden," by George Gibbs.

She was icy in the hell of the mansion. There was a suspension of breathing, of sound, through which a fragile hand with a knife searched and searched.
Then a shocking blow fell on Charles Abbott's head and the Tacon theater rocked and collapsed in darkness.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Two Toasts.
The sharp closing of a door brought Charles Abbott, a man advanced in middle age, abruptly to his feet. He was confused, and averted dizzily, with outstretched arms, as though he were grasping vainly for the dissolving fragments of a shining mirage of youth. They left him, forever, and he stood regarding his strayed sense of immediacy.

The clock on the mantel pointed to the first quarter past eleven; when he had sunk into his abstraction from the present, wandered back into the sunlight of Havana and his days of promise, it had been not more than late afternoon, and now Mrs. Vaux and her daughter, his neighbors, had returned their dinner engagement.

He had wandered into an amazing memory of his beginning manhood. The beginning, he told himself, and in many ways the end—since then he had done little or nothing. After the ignominy of his deportation from Cuba—impending satisfactory negotiations between the United States and Spain, he gathered later, had preserved him from the dignity of political martyrdom—a drabness of life had caught him from which he could perceive no escape.

Not, he was bound to add, that he had actively looked for one. No, his participation in further events had been interfered with by a doubt, his life had been drawn into an endless question.

If he had walked steadily, past Andre Escobar, left him to a murder which, after all, he Charles Abbott, had been powerless to stop, would he have gone on to the triumph of his ideal?

He opened a door of the sideboard, and produced a tall dark bottle of Marquis de Riscal wine, and, seated, poured out a goblet full of the translucent crimson liquid. It brought a slight flush to his cheeks, a light in his eyes, and the shadow a vital humor, a past challenge, to his lips.

He had lifted many toasts in that vintage, his glass striking with a clear vibration against other eagerly-held glasses. More often than not they—Tiro, the guardsman in statue, Remigio, Jaime, Andres and himself—had drunk to La Cavel. He drank to her, probably the sole repository of her memory, her splendor, on earth, now. "La Cavel," he said her name aloud. And then, "Andres."

A sharp gladness seized him that Andres had, almost at the last, heard his voice, his shouted warning and apprehension and love.
If liberty, justice, were to come one life, two, could make no difference; a hundred years, a hundred hundred, were small measures of time!
And if all were doomed, impossible, open to the knife of a fateful Pillar, why, then, they had had their companionship, their warmth, a period of unalloyed fidelity to a need that broke ideals like reeds.

Perhaps what they had found was, after all, with in them, that for which they had swept the sky.
THE END.

BEAUTY CHATS

WINTER MAKE-UP.

There are some women who can use rouge successfully in the winter, because it adheres to the skin. But in summer, when the skin is more active, and the pores open, the color runs off, or rubs off, and the effect is quite dreadful. It is the same with lip sticks or any other make-up.

We won't go into the question of whether or not one should make up. Most women use a touch of rouge frequently, no one is the wiser, they themselves are the prettier, so no one is hurt and no one should be shocked. Make-up is only bad when it is obvious. It is less obvious in winter than summer, because either a powder or a paste rouge clings better to the skin and because a tinted lip stick not only lends color to lips apt to blanch from the cold, but, being made of cream, it prevents chapping and bleeding. To be sure, a white cream lip stick will do that, too, many prefer them to the colored variety.

Make-up looks best, by which I mean less obvious, in winter. I don't know why, unless it is that the slightest artificial look which even the cleverest make-up lends, is more becoming to the serges and satins of winter than the simple muslins of summer days. Or one expects rose cheeks with biting winds. Or one thinks of slightly touched up eyelashes with spangled evening frocks, and not with the tulle and georgines of summer. Make-up is less harmful to the skin in winter, for cream can be used under rouge then, but never in summer, and rouge is drying unless it is of supreme quality.

Here are a list of things for a winter toilet cabinet: glycerine, powdered borax, heavy cold cream, cleansing cream (though the other cream will do for this), borax for a red nose, powdered oatmeal to keep the hands soft, face powder, vanishing cream for hasty freshening up.

Dottie S.:—Dark circles about the eyes indicate some internal disorder. Consult the doctor about them.
Snow White Hair:—There is no way to turn gray hair to that of pure white, but you can keep the gray shade from becoming yellowed by using bluing in the rinse at the time of the shampoo. Another precaution is that of never using a caustic soap. A fine grade of castile is a good choice for your shampooing.

Mary M. P.:—When making the walnut stain for the hair, there is no need to crush the nuts as the coloring is extracted from the shells.

The Rules of the World.

(Edward S. Martin in Harper's.)
"The rule of this world is to get physical power and trust to that for safety and comfort. The rule of this world is to accumulate treasure, to fight one's enemies, to prepare in peace for war. The fortunate in this world, as we have thought of them, have ordinarily been the rich. The fortunate countries have been the strong ones. Anybody who doubted these rules of the world and was strong enough to fight them, has been very ill considered by most of us. The world likes not such men. The mass of the people often like them and follow them and keep them in office. There is still a great class between the teachings of Christ and the practice of the world. What makes it particularly interesting at this time is that the practice of the world seems more than usually to lead to failure. It is not a success. It needs to be bettered. Is there something better to be gotten out of the teachings of Christ? If so, are we getting it?"

WIFE'S FALL DRESS.
WHY DID YOU BUY YOURSELF THAT STYLE OF DRESS?
BECAUSE I LIKE IT.
NO GIRLS I'VE SEEN ARE WEARING THAT KIND.
I KNOW IT.
WHY DON'T YOU WEAR DRESSES THAT ARE ALL THE GO?
BECAUSE;
I DON'T WANT TO WEAR CLOTHES LIKE ARE WORN BY EVERY TOM, DICK AND HARRY.
WHO'S ASKING YOU TO WEAR MEN'S CLOTHES?

Forbes in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their own time. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question.—The Editor.

THE GUMPS—THE SILVER LINING

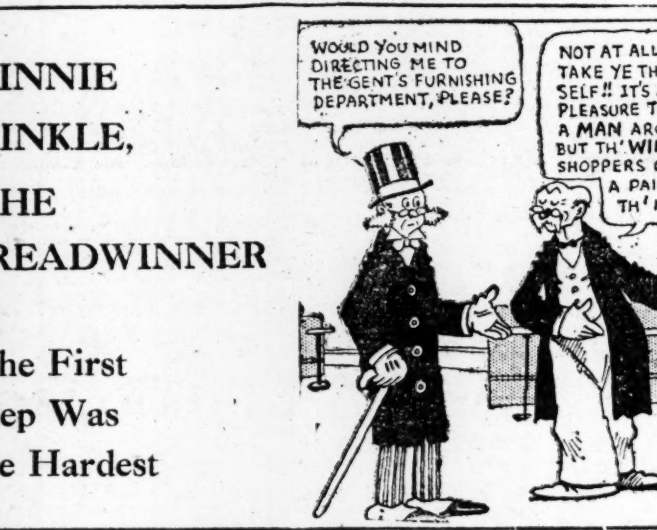

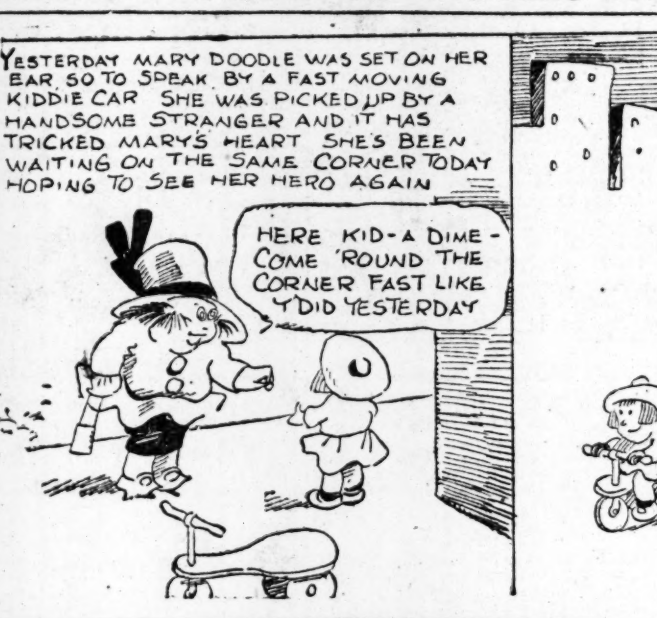

STARVED HEARTS

BY MILDRED BARBOUR

The Price of Constancy.
For a moment Madelon was quite incapable of speech, when she glanced up from her needlework and met the grave eyes of Julian Barton.
The fine line dropped from her suddenly trembling fingers. Warm color flooded her cheeks and crept up to her bright hair. Her eyes widened incredulously.
She got to her feet somehow, conscious that Lane was saying casually:
"You remember Mr. Barton, do you not, Madelon? He returned yesterday from abroad and will be our guest tonight."
She could not believe her ears. Was it possible that Lane had forgotten the day he sent this man out of her life forever? Was it possible that he did not recall that terrible scene when she had vowed to marry him in spite of all Lane could do to prevent it?
But she did not know Lane's need of Barton. She did not reckon on the insignificance of other people's affairs, as measured by the egotistical absorption of Lane himself.

Like one in a daze, she extended her hand to Barton, who accepted it gravely.
"My niece, Mrs. Chandler," Lane was continuing the force of the introduction.
Barton raised his fine brows.
"Mrs. Chandler?" he asked politely. "I had not heard of your marriage. Permit me to offer my felicitations." Madelon's heart contracted.
How cold and formal he was. Had he, too, forgotten?
Her pride summoned a smile.
"Thank you, but you are too late. Mr. Chandler died nearly four years ago."
He bowed.
"I beg your pardon. When one is long away from one's native land, one must expect to be ignorant of events."
"You—you are glad to return?" she faltered.
"Very much so indeed," his familiar smile with its flash of white teeth was like a stab in the heart that was beating slower and slower in her breast. "Breathes there a man with soul so dead?" he quoted lightly. She summoned all her faculties to make casual conversation. She must let slip no reference to the past, she told herself fiercely, since he had chosen to ignore all that had once passed between them.
Determinedly she forced herself to play the gracious, interested, casual hostess. But dinner that night seemed to her interminable. Never had Masters' careful service lagged so from course to course. Never had Stephen Lane lingered so long at the table, keeping her there at her post. If he would only indicate that she
